U. S. INSISTS ON REPLY BY TURKEY

POLICE HUNT MERRILL SLAYERS

SHOTS AT MEN IN TENNESSEE'S BOAT MUST BE EXPLAINED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—That explanations have been asked of the Turkish government of the Smyrna incident was stated by Secretary to the President Joseph Tumulty today on behalf of President Wilson. A full investigation of the matter is being made, declared Mr. Tumulty, and judgment is being suspended in the meantime.

The statement from the White House follows:

The public already knows what happened; namely, a boat from the Tennessee tried to enter a harbor which the Turkish government had declared closed. A shot was fired across her bows to stop her. The captain of the Tennessee reports that it was not intended as a hostile act.

A full investigation of the matter is being made and explanations have been asked of the Turkish government. Previous attempts to communicate with Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople have led to delays of as much as a week.

Repulse of the Russians, with heavy losses, in a furious assault on Przemysl, the Austrian fortress in Galicia, is officially announced by Vienna today.

Petrograd announces that the German attempts to break through the Russian armies in Poland have been checked and that the battle along the 400-mile front is still raging, with Russian positions well maintained.

A Berlin official statement says that violent French attacks near Servon on the western border of the Argonne region have been repulsed with heavy losses. The German losses were insignificant.

REVOLT BY GERMAN PRISONERS.

Paris has received what it says is authentic news that many German prisoners of war have been killed and many others injured in an outbreak in a concentration camp in England. No details are yet obtainable.

Anti-British riots have broken out in Constantinople, according to advices from that place today.

Constantinople issues an official report that a Russian fleet composed of two battleships and five cruisers was attacked and put to flight in an engagement in the Black Sea. The Russians sought safety in flight toward Sebastopol.

The issue of the triple conflict in Poland is awaited with keenest interest.

Two of the battles are in Poland and the other in East Prussia. The Russians claim partial success near Lodz, where they say they have captured a battery of heavy artillery, ten machine guns

POLICE MAKE ARREST AT NORTH STATION

A man calling himself Sappino Francisco of Lawrence was arrested at the North Station by Patrolman O'Brien at 9:30 a.m., charged with carrying a loaded revolver. It was reported that the Brookline police might wish to look at him, as at all other men arrested on this charge today. O'Brien noticed Sappino and suspected he was armed. He strode up to the man, saying: "Give me the gun you've got." "I got no gun," protested Sappino. O'Brien slapped him on the hip and found the weapon. "I was just waiting for my brother-in-law," said Sappino, as he was taken away.

Over Boston and the State today was thrown a police search for the two yeggs who entered the Hitchcock drug store at No. 999 Beacon street last night and shot and killed Charles J. Merrill, manager of the store, after he had kicked shut the safe to prevent their stealing the day's receipts.

Three suspects arrested on Hanover street, after they had been inspected by George Slosson, an employe of the store, were exonerated of blame, and though one will be held on a charge of carrying a loaded revolver, the other two will be released.

Thus the police have absolutely no notion that the police fear they may here be caught. The chief hope is that if one of the other is arrested as a suspect, he may be grilled into a confession, or that the man who held up Slosson may come forward to confess against his partner.

Mrs. Merrill, wife of the slain man, is in a state of collapse today, and is staying in the apartment of E. Leon ne Rahr, in the same apartment house where she and her husband lived.

Mr. Merrill's father and mother came down today from Worcester.

Charles H. Hitchcock, owner of the drug store, said today he thought the

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 21.—Before noon today the vast crowd, which was to number nearly 75,000, began to pour into the immense Yale bowl to see Harvard and Yale play the greatest football game in the history of the sport before the greatest crowd that ever assembled to watch an American amusement.

New Haven was all but overflowing with visitors. Normally the city has a population of about 140,000. This noon that number was increased by nearly one-half. Thousands of automobiles

Thompson Mental Wreck Over Strain of Ticket Sale

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 21.—Everard Thompson, who directed the building of the Yale Bowl, and who handled the sale of the 70,055 tickets for today's Yale-Harvard game, was stricken with nervous prostration in the Hotel Taft last night and is in a serious condition today. Thompson's condition at noon, it is said, was such that he was unable to recognize any of his friends, and he was in a wild delirium.

The strain of nearly twenty hours work a day handling the ticket sale which followed long hours of work in supervising the building of the Bowl are responsible for Thompson's breakdown.

Commits Suicide While Nurse Is Out

Augustus Bailey, a New York man who has been undergoing treatment in Boston for his nerves, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor at his lodgings, No. 791 Washington street, Brookline. Mr. Bailey, who was fifty-five years old, was attended by a nurse, a Buffalo man. The nurse went out on an errand. When he returned he found Mr. Bailey dead in a corner of the bedroom. Dr. Francis J. McMahon of No. 317 Washington street, Brookline, was called, but all he could do was to notify the medical examiner.

and scores of electric cars carried as many as they could hold, but an enormous stream of humanity flowed through the streets afoot.

SQUADS ARRIVE ON THE FIELD.

Trolley cars were jammed, roofs and platforms. Notwithstanding the tremendous seating capacity of the new bowl it did not seem possible at noon that all would be seated when the game began at 2 o'clock. But htye were swarming in steadily through all the portals, like a myriad of ants.

The Harvard and Yale squads motored to the huge bowl at noon and were quickly dressed for the battle. At 1 o'clock some of them appeared and were roundly cheered. It was nearly a half hour later, however, when the husky players arrived on the gridiron en masse. Cheer after cheer went up from thousands and thousands of throats when the crimson and blue besweatered players trotted out onto the field.

The weather was clear and cold and the immense throng in the seats of the bowl were well wrapped in furs and other heavy garments. The Harvard and Yale cheering sections were soon occupied with plenty of color to inspire the other spectators and plenty of noise to exhilarate the players. Bands blared out the favorite old college songs, and added some new ones to their repertoire.

At the time of the beginning of the game it was estimated that more than half a million dollars had been wagered in New Haven, with Harvard favorite at odds ranging from 10 to 8 down to 10 to 6.

BOWL IS WONDERFUL.

It's a wonderful place, this new Yale bowl, where at noon the advance guard of a wonderful crowd began to gather to watch the most spectacular football game ever played.

Stretching in monster circles, or ellipses, rather, the new rows of seats, tier on tier, recall those old pictures of the Roman amphitheatre.

New Haven, as game time drew near, was a seething, surging, solid mass of happy humans. Miles on miles of autos lined the streets, hemming in other miles and miles of street cars.

Slowly the serpentine lines drew up to the great new structure, cars and autos disgorged their crowds and moved on to be immediately replaced by others.

Everyone, without exception, paused a moment, took a look at the impressive exterior of the wonderful structure of which so much has been said and written, then hastened inside to be shown to a seat by one of the army of ushers that moved about —members of said army endeavoring thereby to offset the cold breeze which was snapping around the mammoth enclosure.

To all appearances the playing field, strangely new looking for the stage of a big game, was fairly dry.

YALE BETTORS GASPING.

But those who ought to know, told us that before the day is done, it would be demonstrated that there are some very soft spots.

All through the morning Harvard continued favorite in the betting and, despite odds which they thought false, the Crimson supporters actually had the Yale adherents gasping for breath ere it was time to start for the game.

It is a surety that hundreds of thousands of dollars would shift owners when this big battle had ended.

It was strange to see persons, with all the outward evidences of wealth, eating lunches from out of little cardboard boxes down in the seats. But that's just what they were doing and apparently enjoying it. But the crowd was rather slow to fill up those seats.

The specs never used to have any great amount of trouble getting tickets when 30,000 folks seemed almost like a real gathering in the old Yale yard. With the justly celebrated 70,000 to shoot at the boys apparently find the mark just that much easier to hit, the inflection in this instance being on "the mark."

The Hotel Taft, called by some on these occasions the "Hotel Daft," seems to be the headquarters for most of the football enthusiasts. They have built a new hotel down near the New Haven Railway station, and it is jammed, but sooner or later everybody gravitates to the Taft.

Crowd Rushes to See New Bowl.

One of the great mysteries of big league football which has not yet been solved is why a person who has been able to acquire a room through main strength and awkwardness rarely, if ever, goes near the room, but stands around talking of its manifold attractions in the hearing of much more deserving persons who are quite roomless.

Most everybody who got in before yesterday rushed right on out to the Yale bowl to see if it is all that it has been cracked up to be. It is. Standing—or rather squatting, for such seems to be its posture—squatting as it does this minute in all the nakedness of a forest of temporary seats made of raw pine, that bowl is something to see and marvel at.

It creates about the same consternation in the football reportorial mind as the Grand Canon of the Colorado seems to create in the mind of writers on more elevating topics.

As we understand the Grand Canon of the Colorado, it is very hard to describe. Words fail. At least they are generally reported as failing, and that is about the way it is with the Yale bowl.

The writer of this piece took with him to view the bowl a man who is suspected to have an undsually large vocabulary, who is commonly accounted fluent at all times, and he took one slant at the structure and said:

"Whew. She is one heluva big dump, ain't she? but is anybody going to see what the players are doing from up here in this here box? That's what I want to know."

That's what we want to know, too, but, of course, this is a private matter, and does not concern the readers.

Chalk Lines Look Like Mere Thread.

It will be gathered from the above, however, that the bowl—they call it "Stadia" hereabouts—practically beggars description and makes a bum of fancy, and if it does this when it is all empty and echo-y and redolent of fresh air, you can imagine what it will do to people trying to write about it when it is tenanted by the 70,000.

A man felt mighty skinny and low down and insignificant standing in the midst of all that emptiness with the long stretches of seats rolling back until it seemed as if they must reach onto the far horizon.

It is very easy to believe that it will seat the famous 70,000 or any other number of people that the management suggests. We have no idea how so many folks all in a cluster look because we never saw that many in a cluster and we have never seen anybody who claims to have seen such a sight, but we are now ready to believe that it is going to be quite impressive.

There has never been a paid attendance crowd of more than 50,000—if as many—at a sporting event anywhere on the American continent. Records for attendance are represented by the Army and Navy football game of 1913 at the Polo Grounds and one game of a World's Series at the Polo Grounds.

It is claimed that a game of baseball between amateur teams in Cleveland drew close to 55,000 people, but admission was free.

Therefore the crowd today will be a record-breaking one if it is big enough to fill the bowl.

There is much more to be said about this bowl, of course, but it is not all to be said at present, else there might not be anything left to say in the future. It is a very large subject and requires mature reflection, but the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies figure that the bowl should be worth enough to them in telegraph tolls to enable them to give each member of the Football Writers' Association of America a life annuity.

DRY FIELD FORCES THE ODDS DOWN TO 10 TO 9 ON HARVARD

By AL.

It was crips and clear, there was but a slight wind and the sun shone down full and fair on a city jammed to the limit with a throng of happy humanity, masculine and feminine.

New Haven was filled to overflowing last night, but with the first train in from New York this morning a new invasion was in full blast. Every coach on the long special train was packed, people, rich and poor alike, glorying in the great occasion despite more or less physical discomfort.

There was likewise a constant stream of autos from all directions filled with befurred football fans, many of whom have journeyed hundreds of miles over the road to be on hand for the clash of the football heroes.

It is doubtful if the country ever such such a gathering of wealth, beauty and joy—or, in a word, real class—as the little city of New Haven presents this snappy November morning.

There was a mad rush for tickets this morning among the hundreds who came to the front without having made previous reservations. But there were mighty few tickets to be had, and these few brought fancy prices.

A big crowd was at the station to greet the Harvard team, which came in on a special from New London at 10:30. The Harvard band and cheering section was out en masse, and the auto parade of the players to the Taft Hotel, where they had lunch, was a triumphal parade.

The Yale rooters, too, gathered in the throng anxious for a peek at the big team they hope and expect to see beaten by their own favorites later on in the day.

The Harvard players were smiling and happy and chock full of the winning spirit. There was not a noticeable sign of nervousness in the big squad, which to the happy Harvard enthusiasts augured well for the proceedings of the afternoon.

GREATEST NIGHT EVER KNOW IN HISTORY OF NEW HAVEN

Last nght was undoubtedly the largest night that New Haven has ever known. Every hotel, cafe, restaurant and other resort where the wine was red, or yellow, or whatever colors big league grape is supposed to be, was jammed to those guards we have referred to before.

There were thousands and thousands of college students out to make a night of it, and there were all the pretty girls and all the other parquisites that are necessary when students are out to make a night, at which occupation they are howling successes, judging by last evening.

Everybody was happy and everybody was quite busy trying to make everybody else happy. Nobody needed any encouragement but all got it. Nobody, that is, who had a room or a place in one of those hotels, cafes and similar places.

For there were hundreds and thousands who had no places and who didn't have much hope of getting any, though before the night wore past most of the tardy succeeded in being fixed up somehow.

It was a fact, though, that those who had rooms showed not the least inclination to make use of the same, while those who hadn't expressed fervent desire to get in out of the cold.

For the night before turned out cold and clear, just the kind of a preamble that helps to make a big football game one of the gilt edge events on the country's social register.

The hotels and cafes reaped a golden harvest. It would seem to a stranger that most of the hostelries here are put up just for the Harvard and Yale game.

Prices soared and soared, and in some places persons who had made quotations found that rates had advanced, and were kindly though firmly assured that it couldn't be helped—the law of supply and demand made it necessary.

So they paid and then proceeded to lose their grudges in the general air of hilarity that was prevalent all about the town.

Just as a sample of the price question, the Taft quotations were seven dollars a copy for a room and said room had to be engaged for at least two days.

But the price did not stop the enthusiastic from crowding the hotel as it has never been crowded before.

The eats, too were a considerable item of expense. At the same Taft, lunch today will be two dollars a plate, while dinner will come to just twice that amount. But even at that it's a question as to whether there'll be enough food or enough room or enough time to let the hungry pay the two dollars or the four dollars.

TICKETS WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD.

Persons who came ticketless to the city, expecting that pasteboards would be easily procured, received the shock of their gay young or old lives. Seventy thousand tickets and all the speculators had mighty few and what they had brought good prices.

Twenty-five dollars a pair was the general quotation, while several sets of especially good seats brought twice that sum.

And after the sidewalk merchants had closed out, the disappointed contented themselves with going out near the bowl and listening to the yells and the cheers, getting thereby, we hope, some crumbs of comfort.

SULLIVAN WANTS WHISKER BILL HEARD BY SMOOTH SHAVEN

Representative to See That No Prejudiced Individuals Block New Legislation.

Representative Lewis R. Sullivan is planning a determined fight for his anti-whiskers bill in the next Legislature; and as the first step will introduce, before the committees are named, a resolution to this effect:

"That no physicians or dentists who wear whiskers or mustaches shall be appointed members of the Committee on Public Health, which will pass on this bill."

"I think this is the logical first move," said Representative Sullivan today. "It's natural for a physician or any other man who has worn whiskers all his life, who has watched them grow up from little fuzz-patches till they are really old friends, to become attached to them. I don't blame such a man. And I wouldn't blame him for fighting to keep his whiskers.

"But I do feel that such a man ought not to be allowed to strangle in its infancy this measure to protect the health of our citizens.

"Therefore, my first move will be to attempt to secure fair play for my anti-whiskers bill by seeing to it that no doctors or dentists with whiskers get a chance to kill this bill in committee."

Representative Sullivan will probably meet a hard fight on this feature of his bill. The men sure to be affected are Senator Ezra W. Clark of Brockton and Representative George F. Hart of Webster. Senator Clark has been for two years Senate-chairman of the Committee on Public Health, and is sure to be reappointed to that post. Representative Hart has been on the committee for two years; and since Dr. Enos H. Bigelow, former House-chairman, is not in the House this year, Representative Hart is expected to be named House-chairman of the committee.

Senator Clark has a well-groomed white beard and mustache, and Representative Hart has a flourishing black mustache. These "hirsute appendages," in the language of the bill, are to be the first targets of Representative Sullivan's campaign.

There are three doctors and three dentists in the House of Representatives this year. Besides Dr. Hart there are Dr. Charles B. Frothingham of Lynn, and Dr. John P. Nickerson of West Harwich, not to mention dentists three — Addison P. Beardsley of Roxbury, John P. Good of Cambridge and Joseph C. Perry of Shelburn Falls.

Whether Dr. Frothingham is bearded or otherwise has not been ascertained. He is a newcomer in the Legislature. But Dr. Nickerson of West Harwich wears a beard and doesn't propose to stand any foolishness about it. The three dentists, however, are clean-shaven. Joseph C. Perry says he's clean-shaven as a matter of business—that it pays to be sanitary, and Representative Sullivan can probably count on him as an ally.

FREAK BETS ON RESULT

Harvard ruled a distinct favorite over Yale in the betting in Boston, the odds generally being 10 to 7 and 10 to 8 on the Crimson. Notwithstanding the abundance of Harvard money and the undisguised confidence of the Yale supporters, no unusually large wagers were registered.

Hundreds of wagers were made in State street yesterday and around the hotel district last night upon the outcome of the game. Just how much money in the aggregate will be exchanged if the game results in a tie would be difficult to conjecture, for while most of the bets were made with the understanding that either team must win, there were a number of "freak" wagers.

Although Yale men in Boston were demanding odds it is significant that sporting men in Providence were laying wagers at evens, and from New Haven word was received that while the Elis are asking odds, they are willing to back their team at even money.

The odds on the eve of the contest have practically been the same as for a week, although a number of sporting men, who were giving odds of 10 to 7 less than a week ago, shortened the second choice price one point last night and refused to risk more than $100 to $80.

The professional betters, as well as some brokers, generally placed their money straight—one team to win, but with the usual understanding that on a tie the bets would be called off. Undergraduates and alumni laid bets on all sorts of propositions. One State street man fancied that Harvard would score twice as many points as Yale. His argument was that Harvard would score at least one goal from the field, which he considered would be sufficient to win.

Other bets were made that Brickley would get into the game. One uptown man bet that the Harvard captain would not only attempt a field goal, but that Brickley would also rush the ball, believing that if Brickley found the Yale men charging to block an attempt at a field goal he would forget his injury and attempt a run.

25,000 QUIT HUB FOR GAME

"On to New Haven!"

This was the rallying cry of twenty-five thousand men and women of all ages who formed a mighty exodus from Boston today for the battle zone at New Haven, where the football warriors of Harvard and Yale clash in the annual encounter that for a day makes the East the centre of the universe.

Eighteen trains on the New Haven railroad rolled out of the South Station between 7:45 and 10 o'clock, bearing this mighty host. Others were speeding over the road in autos, all intent upon the outcome of the struggle of the pupils of Haughton and Hinkey.

EVERBODY HAPPY.

Perfect order prevailed. The enormous crowd at the South Station was well handled by the railroad company and the police officials.

No one was hurt. No one was arrested. Everybody was happy except the commuter, who arrived on the incoming train, bound for work. In order to get to the office on time he had to resort to old-fashioned football.

Lucky was the business girl who had an escort. One young man personally escorted five pretty young ladies to an exist by putting up an umbrella and using it as a wedge.

The crowd did not stay in any one place long as the trains pulled out at intervals of five minutes. Each coach was overflowing. No one seemed to care about seats. All they wanted was to get aboard a train and to have that train get to New Haven as fast as possible.

One glance at the crowd would convince a stranger that an Arctic expedition was about to start out. Every conceivable kind of a fur garment was in evidence. There were valuable fur coats, near fur coats and all sorts and descriptions of foot wear and head wear.

PREPARED FOR THE COLD.

Everybody was prepared for a cold trip. The hundreds of young ladies all wrapped up made an exceptionally pretty picture. Huge bouquets of varying flowers, long streamers, pennants of both teams, arm bands and flags, all added to the picture.

Songs were sung, cheers were given, and everywhere laughter prevailed. The trains went out on schedule time and no complaints were registered during the entire period of the rush.

One noticeable feature was the special edition of the AMERICAN which was offered the fans at the station. They sold like hot cakes. This edition contained a full page detailed diagram of the bowl and showed just how each seat could be easily reached.

Church Bequests by Marlboro Priest

The will of Rev. Fr. Joseph C. Caisse, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church, Marlboro, was filed in the Probate Court, East Cambridge. He left $1,500 to the archbishop of Boston with the recommendation that it be used at St. Mary's Church and the parish school connected with it, and $2,000 to the College of the Assumption in the Province of Quebec, the income to be used in assisting the education of young men. Many books and pamphlets were left to the above college. The rest of the bequests were private.

Cretic Sails, but Stowaways Remain

The White Star liner Cretic sailed at noon for the Azores, Naples and Genoa with ten saloon, seventy-five cabin and 1850 steerage passengers. Stowaways were reported to Captain Howarth, who mustered the crew of the ship on deck. Officers and picked men made a quick search and brought to light seven stowaways. It is believed that there are more on board. After the vessel gets to sea another search will be made.

Foster Coates, Newspaper Man

When a strong man drops out of the ranks in his prime, the rank moves on, as it must, but many a comrade misses the elbow touch that was inspiration, and the serried rank remembers the force that was always steadfast, and the spirit that was loyal, without a break through the whole length of the march.

Foster Coates, who died in Atlanta Tuesday, and was buried at New York today, had borne a constructive and helpful part in every Hearst newspaper from Boston to Los Angeles. He was one of the capable and efficient men in the realm of modern journalism. His judgment was keen, his decisions swift, and his execution as prompt as it was balanced and admirable. He moved with perfect temper and rare serenity through intricate problems of the modern newspaper, and his genial face and winning smile softened many of the asperities which belong to the ever-changing details of his craft.

A man of the world in manner and in culture, a deep student of conditions, a patient master of the intricacies of his own profession, and a brave soldier in the line of his convictions, he left not an enemy in the several camps of journalism of which he was for a time the vigorous executive; while from his beloved chief down to the latest lieutenant in the ranks there remain respect and confidence and in many hearts a positive affection for the master journalist who so suddenly fell asleep in the capital of Dixie.

It is a rare tribute to the self-effacing modesty of this notable figure in the world's work that those who survive him find no written chronicle of his achievement. The printed annals have from his hand only three lines of terse biography.

But those who have worked side by side with this strong, wise man in the noonday glare and in the wee small hours of the newspaper night, remember him as a soldier without fear and without reproach.

He literally died at his post. He left his office in Atlanta only two hours before his death. Every paper on his desk and in his lockers was in perfect order. The mission he was sent to perform was complete.

"I am through!" he said simply. "I am going home!"

Perhaps he did not realize the prophetic significance of his last words. And perhaps he did realize. There is ever a seer's forecast in a faithful life. His work was finished. There was not a duty committed to his hands that had been left undone.

Foster Coates was one of the great newspaper workers of his day of great newspapers. Playing not in the forefront, but in the centre, there came to him little of glory or applause. But to those upon the inside who knew the concert plan, this strong hand that drew the bow across the many strings had done its part brilliantly and well, and the orchestral chorus of the morning and the evening not only leaned upon, but loved him.

He has fought a good fight. He has kept the faith, and who shall doubt that with his tired hands folded above his faithful heart he has passed out of the dark night of death into the light and freshness of an Eternal Morning?

Funeral of Foster Coates Held at St. Bartholomew's

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The funeral of the late Foster Coates, former publisher of the Atlanta Georgian and one of the best known newspaper men in the United States, was held in St. Bartholomew's Church today. Bishop David H. Greer officiated. Afterwards the body was shipped to Baltimore for burial.

The bearers were Whitney Lyon, John J. Amory, Arthur L. Clarke, Bradford Merrill, Hugh F. Murray and Don C. Seitz.

Demurrer Filed by Billard Men

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 21.—In the Superior Court today, through their attorneys, Cummings and Lockwood, Charles F. Linsley, John L. Billard and Samuel Hemingway, former directors of the New Haven Railroad, who were sued by the road for the recovery of millions alleged to have been diverted through th Billard company, fild a demurrer alleging that the New England Navigation Company has no reason to be a party plaintiff in the suit, that the plaintiffs are not entitled to relief inasmuch as there was no agreement with the defendants, and that the charge that there were two secret trusts is not ba ed on facts. They also filed a motion to remove the New ngland Navigation Company as a party plaintiff. C. S. Mellen, in his own behalf, also filed a motion similar to the latter.

RUM RAIDS AT 5 DRUG STORES STIR CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge is stirred up today over the five liquor raids of last night, when vast quantities of whiskey, gin and the like were seized in Cambridge drug stores. The raids are the result, it is said, of investigations by a committee of fifteen, composed of pastors and laymen, who charged widespread illicit liquor traffic. More raids are expected to occur tonight.

The officers who made the raids filed their returns with the clerk of courts today, and these returns showed that the following liquors were seized:

Whiskey, about 93 gallons; rum about 5 gallons, gin about 12 gallons, mixed liquors about 3 gallons, ale about 77 gallons, brandy a quart, wine a quart, porter a gallon.

PATROL WAGON STALLED.

At the drug store of Lewis W. Reycroft, No. 476 Massachusetts avenue, the quantity of liquor seized weighed several hundred pounds, and the six patrolmen there weighed about 1,500 pounds all told, so that the horse drawing the wagon was stranded and had to be helped by the crowd in getting up momentum to drag the load away.

Two stores of the La Pierre drug company were raided. At No. 81 Concord avenue, where James T. O'Neil is manager, the liquor seized included: Thirteen and one-half gallons of whiskey in 107 bottles and one jug, two gallons of rum in sixteen bottles; one-quarter gallon of brandy in a jug, 3¾ gallons of gin in 16 bottles, one quart of wine, 7½ gallons of ale in 29 bottles, one-half gallon of porter.

At the same company's store at No. 223 Putnam avenue, where Leopold Bartel is manager, the liquor seized totalled: One hundred and three half pints of whiskey, 69 half pints of rum, three half pints of gin, nine quarts of ale, six pints of porter.

LYNCH COMPANY'S YIELD.

At the John D. Lynch Drug Company, No. 2,400 Massachusetts avenue, the officers gathered in: Twenty-four and one-half gallons of whiskey in 136 bottles, three-quarters gallon of rum in nine bottles, 1½ gallons of gin in 17 bottles, 3¾ gallons of mixed liquors in 13 bottles, seven gallons of ale in 27 bottles.

The biggest haul in bulk was at the Reycroft store at No. 476 Massachusetts avenue. It included 36[illegible] gallons of whiskey in 588 bottles, 47¾ bottles of ale in 131 bottles, 6 drinking glasses and 2 bottle openers.

Albert B. Lynch's store at No. 425 Cambridge street yielded 14 7-16 gallons of whiskey in 162 bottles, 6½ gallons of gin in 1 bottle and a half barrel, 12½ gallons of ale in 50 bottles, 18 empty ale bottles, 23 empty lager bottles.

SULLIVAN INQUIRY AGAIN NEARS SUIT OF "PRETTIEST GIRL"

HOULTON, Me., Nov. 21.—In spite of all he has done to help the State, it was learned today that Ambrose Bridge, sweetheart of Mildred Sullivan, still occupies a decidedly precarious position in the investigation into the death and concealment of the body of the seventeen-year-old Houlton schoolgirl.

It was revealed today that the night Bridge spent at the Houlton Jail last week was not a mere detention as a witness, but an outright arrest. One of the county officials who has charge of these duties admitted this. He said:

"Ambrose Bridge was locked up, but it was later agreed that he would tell more if given his freedom, so he was liberated next morning."

The admission is looked upon as significant. Bridge's role in the tragedy has been singular from the start. He has been publicly denounced, but he hasn't made a whimper. His arrest has been hinted, but it hasn't caused him to budge an inch.

The relatives of the dead girl, all but the mother, have urged County Attorney Archibald to arrest the young man, but nothing has come of it.

Bridge told an AMERICAN reporter, today, that he was aware of all this, but it isn't worrying him a particle.

QUESTIONED BY OFFICIALS.

But what was not generally known was Ambrose Bridge's arrest and swift release, following the confession of Katherine Michaud, and the fact that after Mildred's body was found in the woodland grave her father, who was one of the searching party, demanded of County Attorney Archibald that Bridge be arrested at once.

Evidence against the wealthy Houlton citizen, who has suddenly come to be one of the central figures in the murder mystery, is increasing daily.

This man is already aware that the authorities know all and that he is likely to be arrested at any time. A deputy sheriff has talked with him.

Developments today showed that one or two other influential Houlton citizens may also be drawn in, if not as accessories, at least as witnesses to facts which would expose them in a measure.

As the secrets of the tragedy are slowly unfolding the mother of Mildred Sullivan, Mrs. George Sullivan, for weeks an invalid, looms conspicuously in the case. Attorneys for Sullivan assert she will not be a witness at the trial, it is understood that she will be compelled to submit her state of health is considered by medical experts to make hazardous the strain and excitement of an appearance in court.

DEMANDED AN ARREST.

"When I saw what they had done with Mildred's body," said Mr. Sullivan, today, "I was furious. I hardly knew what to say, or do, but the first thought that came to me was that the author of the trouble should be punished, as well as the others already jailed."

"Mr. Archibald was among the searchers. I went to him on the spot and demanded that Bridge be locked up and punished. Mr. Archibald had a queer look in his voice, I thought, when he answered: 'Mr. Sullivan, kindly let me handle this case my own way.' I said no more after that.

"I look for other arrests in this case, but I cannot tell things I know. County Attorney Archibald will not overlook a single person who had anything to do with this affair. The public may rest assured of that. Our duty is coming. Mildred's death and Bruta's handling will be avenged."

Two more arrests will be made in the Sullivan case, but probably not before final adjournment of the Grand Jury on Wednesday. It would not be surprising, however, if caplases were served before then.

As Thursday will be Thanksgiving, it is thought the grand jurors will try to finish their work by Wednesday noon.

The defence in the Sullivan case will not be given very much time between the return of the indictments and the starting of the trial early in December. But Attorneys Shaw, Burleigh and Clark are not wasting an hour in their efforts to clear Dr. Lionel E. Dudley, who is charged with murder, and Alice and Pearl Pellitier, who are charged with being accessories to the death of Mildred Sullivan.

Counsel for the defence are being assisted by private detectives. They are holding conferences with their clients at the jail and evening sessions at their law offices, they say that they will paint the case in a different color before they get through.

CLASH ON DEFENCE.

They will devote much of their attention to the family life of the Sullivans and the part that Ambrose Bridge played in the home, while a bogey there. They will call attention to the fact that Mildred's father has not been living at home for some months, but that he was employed on the farm of Fred Melville, a relative, at Presque Isle.

They will lay stress upon the visits of Mildred to the Nicaseron Lake dance hall. They will also look up every feature of the record of Ambrose Bridge, but will centre their heaviest fire on Katherine Michaud, the star witness for the State. They claim to know much about Katie Michaud already. They say they can produce facts which will, in their opinion, riddle her confession.

The defence also claims that Dudley did not receive a dollar from Bridge, Katie Michaud or Mildred Sullivan, but that they can prove Bridge and Katie Michaud had plenty of money.

Dr. Dudley received a number of visitors yesterday. He was in cheerful spirits. A friend was surprised and greatly touched when Dr. Dudley opened a medical book and pointed to the photograph of his two children, Margerie, six, and Pauline, four.

LOOKS AT PHOTOGRAPHS.

"They are my babies," said the doctor, tenderly. Aren't they pretty? They are a great comfort to me and I like to look at their pictures while here."

The children, since the divorce three years ago, have been in the custody of Miss Lulu Davis Dudley, at Caribou.

Alice Pellitier has become nervous and restless the past few days. She refused to be in the cell with Bridge, requested that the light in her cell be left on all night. She complains that she cannot sleep.

Her seventeen-year-old brother, Percy, shares the cell with Dr. Dudley. He is a large boy for his age. He has accepted his imprisonment with indifference.

Katie Michaud told the guard today that she was glad the Grand Jury ordeal was over. She supposed that was all there would be for her to do and that she could return to her parents' home at Walhegran.

But she evidently will have to stay longer. There isn't any doubt, though that she will receive clemency for what she has done to clear the mystery of Mildred Sullivan's death and burial.

The brevity of the Grand Jury hearing and the quick suspension of the Sullivan case following the recital of Katie Michaud's confession was construed in legal circles as an index to the strength of the government's case.

John Jay McDevitt of Wilkesbarre, Pa., who played as a millionaire for a day and carried his own status to Washington, D. C., on a special train, in a letter to a Boston friend says he may soon take up his residence here.

He addresses "the good people of Boston" and says in part:

"I, John Jay McDevitt, the millionaire for one diem, feel very much that I would like to live in the city of Boston.

"I am a young man with lots of ideas, some serious and others not so solid. I want to do things, and would like people in my home town would remember the fact that I am not always the jester.

"Now, then, I will in the near future call to your town and look it over. If I realize that I am welcome I will hang up my hat, my two suits of clothes and proceed to become a real Bostonian."

Find Cape Canal Useful for a War

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Navy Department today announced that the usefulness of the Cape Cod Canal in the national system of defence had been demonstrated by the sending of the submarines K-5 and K-6 through that waterway. Not only submarines but destroyers and light vessels of all kinds, according to the department, could use the canal in time of war.

WELLESLEY GIRLS SYSTEMATIZE WORK FOR WAR RELIEF

Elizabeth Pilling, Wellesley 1916, who is active in war relief plans of college girls.

Wellesley College girls are systematising their work for war relief, and at a meeting addressed by Dr. McFayden, a London clergyman, in Houghton Memorial Chapel, various phases of the war were discussed.

Dr. McFayden told something of the need for relief, and Professor Vida D. Scudder of the college faculty discussed the possibilities of spiritual development out of the war.

Then Miss Elizabeth Pilling of the class of 1916, who lives in Hartford, outlined ways in which Wellesley girls can help. Miss Regina Kronacher, '16, of Cincinnati, reported on the work the college is already doing. She told how mufflers are being knitted, clothes made and money raised. She urged the immediate need of warm clothing.

It was arranged to have someone in touch with the relief work meet the girls in an informal gathering every Sunday afternoon.

BARKER, HEAD OF STATE GAS BOARD, IS DEAD

Forest E. Barker, chairman of the Massachusetts Gas and Electric Light Commission, died today from heart trouble at Washington, D. C., where he was attending a conference of railroad, gas and electric light commissioners.

He had been a member of the Gas and Electric Commission since 1885 and chairman since 1894, and was recognized throughout the United States as an expert on gas and electric light matters. He was sixty-one years old. He was born at Exeter, N. H., son of Josiah G. and Betsey (Kent) Barker. He was graduated from Wesleyan University in 1874 and studied two years at Boston University Law School. In 1881 he married Flora I. Hovey of Worcester, who survives him, with a son and daughter. The former is Stanley D. Barker of 60 State street.

He lived several years in Worcester, moving a few years ago to Watertown. He represented a Worcester district in the House for two years prior to being appointed to the Gas and Electric Light Commission.

In 1894 and 1895 he visited Europe, studying lighting conditions, by order of the Legislature.

He was a high degree Mason and a life member of the Grand Council. He belonged to the Odd Fellows, Greek letter societies, Methodist organizations, Republican political clubs and the University Club.

HUNT MAN WHO SLASHED WOMAN IN SOMERVILLE

Search is being made in the North End today for a man known only as Tony, who slashed Mrs. Ida M. Andrews, forty-five, of No. 22 Quincy street, Somerville, across the throat and neck with a razor as they were standing at the corner of Somerville avenue and Quincy street, Somerville.

The assault, according to the police was made after Tony had been shown furnished rooms at her home by Mrs. Andrews, who met him in Boston. He inquired where he could get a car back to Boston and Mrs. Andrews volunteered to escort him to the corner of Somerville avenue and Quincy street.

They waited several minutes for a car, and as one approached, Mrs. Andrews turned to Tony, saying: Here's your car."

Tony struck her, across the face, which she thought was a slap, and ran away. Two boys standing near by saw the woman bleeding and that was the first knowledge she had of being cut.

Harry M. Andrews, husband of the woman, first opposed sending her to the Somerville Hospital, but later consented, on the advice of Patrolman Naylon.

Tony is described as being about thirty years old, about 5 feet 6 inches in height, wearing working clothes.

GIVES UP GREAT RICHES TO WED CLOAK MODEL

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—"I have lost my inheritance, my means of livelihood and my family because of my marriage to a woman not of my religious faith, but in spite of it all I am happier now than before in my life, and my wife shares my happiness. The report that Josephine and I had separated is preposterous."

In these words, Walter Richter, son of Daniel Richter, millionaire necktie manufacturer, of No. 45 East Seventy-ninth street, told how he has been disinherited because he had married a beautiful cloak model. She is or was Josephine Longini, the name known in the fashionable world as New York's most beautiful and highest salaried model.

"I met my wife early last June at the home of a mutual friend," said the bridegroom today. "Throughout the Summer we made frequent trips to Long Island and were much in each other's company around town. Later, during the absence of my family in Europe, we became engaged.

"I knew then, and I told my wife, that there could be no bar to our marriage so far as my father was concerned. He would disinherit me for his ideas on religion are extremely old-fashioned and orthodox.

"Consequently it was not without careful consideration that we made preparations to marry. A man does not throw away a fortune lightly and I had every reason to believe that my father who is a very wealthy manufacturer, would leave me a considerable share of his millions.

"Nevertheless, after putting the matter squarely before Josephine and explaining to her that I would probably come to her penniless if she married me, we agreed to put aside all consideration of money and go on with our romance regardless of my father.

At this juncture young Mrs. Richter took up the story.

"Yes," she said, "since we were really in love with each other there was no use considering practicities. I told Walter that it made no difference to me what his father did, and on September 3, shortly before his family sailed from England, we took our fate in our own hands and were quietly married."

BLANCO'S COUP STOPS RIOTING IN MEXICO CITY

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21.—It is believed the coup d'etat by which General Blanco proclaimed himself executive head in this city, overruling the authority of General Obregon, will have a peaceful ending. It is learned on the highest authority that General Blanco will remain in the capital to act as the agent through whom the new government will take over the reins. General Villa is expected here within a week.

The streets of Mexico City are deserted today. Houses are bolted and barred and scores are closed. Last evening noisy groups began to gather in the downtown part of the city, but the police of Lucio Blanco's brigade kept them under control.

Panic swept over the capital when the hordes of Zapata, acting under orders, began to seize horses. High stepping, good old family friends, cab horse, one and all were commandeered at the point of rifles. Here and there a lucky whose sole support was his horse and ramshackle vehicle plied his whip and clutched madly at the reins. Then bullets flew and pedestrians ran helter skelter for the nearest doorways.

This was the beginning of the disorder. Later came haranguing groups and bands of noisy street urchins and if it had not been for the patrols there's no knowing how far the mob would have carried things.

Mr Cardoson, the Brazilian minister, and John R. Silliman, personal representative of President Wilson, together with the dean of the diplomatic corps, Juan Ortega, minister from Guatemala, went to Obregon's headquarters and put up a (if demand for positive assurances that the capital would not be with-) adequate troop protection during the interval of the evacuation of the (garrison and the entrance of either Villa's followers or Zapatas' Blanco said he could control the situation. "I have 22,000 troops about the city," he declared. "They will not leave until some sort of organized government has been established here."

The diplomats thanked him and left.

'THE WOMAN OF TODAY SHOULD WORK,' HE SAYS

"Woman, Lord bless her, is hard to define," said Leslie Willis Sprague in the course of his lecture before the School Voters' League in Ford Hall. He discussed woman's duty to society and the necessity of her voting to protect her own interests as well as those which bear upon the home life. He called upon husbands to be tender, faithful and considerate of their wives, no matter what they were.

"What is a woman? This is a question we must answer," he continued. "She is a human soul. She is different from man. Women are not like men. They should not seek to be men or in any way imitate them. The ideal of woman that is current is the outgrowth of conditions which have passed away. Home was the great factor in the life of a woman, but this has now changed. Only a few of the home ties remain. Everything. There have been new fields of activity for woman. Woman's relation to society is different today. Many women can have no home under present conditions. We must, therefore, reconstruct the ideal woman. She is to work either in creative ways or with her hands.

"No woman should be idle. It is the duty of every human being to create human wealth. Every wife whose husband receives only $12 a week should work to help him.

"How of some wealthy women who should pay some one to give them a job. There are too many pampered females."

After defining the responsibility of parenthood and how parents were neglecting it, the speaker continued to define what every mother should have. Spiritual love, a sound heritage, and proper care of offspring.

"People should not be allowed to marry who can't support a family," he urged. "It is not the duty of every woman to become a mother. We must get rid of that idea. There is a lack of parental responsibility in this nation. Vast millions of children in America fall because they lack it."

Bodies Reveal Lake Michigan Disaster

GRAND MARIAS, Mich., Nov. 21.—Eight bodies, two of them women, were brought in today by the lifesaving crew here. It is believed that the steamer Curtis with the two barges A. M. Peterson and Marbin have gone to the bottom. Wreckage is piled along the shore where the bodies were found. Part of the debris has been identified as belonging to the A. M. Peterson. Each of the barges carried a crew of seven men. There were about ten men on the Curtis in command of Captain Jennings.

RUSSIANS CLAIM PARTIAL VICTORY IN POLAND BATTLE

and several hundred prisoners. The Germans say only that no decision has been reached in the fighting around Lodz.

Along the line from Czenstochowa to Cracow, the Germans recently driven over the Silesian border have been reinforced, but there are signs that the Germans are losing here, as it is reported two of the Kaiser's generals, Von Bredow and Von Bromel, have committed suicide, holding themselves responsible for reverses to the German arms.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE A FORT.

The third battle is on the extreme north of the line, in East Prussia, where the Russian right is pushing its way through the country around the Mazurian Lakes. Germany officially admits that the Russians have captured a fort in this region, but declare the place was unoccupied and contained nothing but old, obsolete cannon.

The Germans claim progress to the south of Plock. The Russian official statement concludes:

"On November 17 and 18 we took 3,000 Austrian prisoners. In Galicia we have occupied Wisnicz, Gorlice, Dukla and Ujok."

In the Franco-Belgian theatre of battle the French admit the invaders have reoccupied the portion of Chauvoncourt which the latter destroyed by mines after their initial retreat. The Germans also claim to have repulsed a French attack near Verdun. Severe weather has held up military operations.

Around Ypres, where the Germans have been driven in West Flanders by the fierce shelling from the British fleet and the inundation by the Belgians, the exhausted troops in the trenches are resting while the heavy artillery wages a duel. Snow is falling and the gales have driven the tidewater inland, increasing the area of the inundated district.

The allies continue to hold Ypres, despite the fact that the Germans continue to bring up large reinforcements. Ypres has been almost battered to pieces. Its largest houses have been demolished by huge shells, each weighing nearly a ton and a half, arriving almost vertically at a speed of 200 yards a second. The allies' success in keeping their lines intact against the German force in the Ypres region is attributed by expert observers to the care which the commanding officers are bestowing upon the comfort of their men.

The Servian War Office at Nish today issued an official statement claiming victories over the Austrians through artillery attacks and stating that the enemy was forced to retire at several points.

JAPS WILL ASK LARGER NAVY.

A Tokio dispatch today says Count Okuma, the Prime Minister, will ask the Japanese Diet for a larger army and navy when the Diet assembles, December 5.

Berlin hears, by the way of Holland, that the French lost 20,000 men at Bixschoote, and that 1,500 British were drowned in the Yser Canal.

Copenhagen says that the German killed and wounded to date number 1,250,000, and that 500,000 are sick. Official casualty lists, including Wurtemburg, Saxony, Bavaria and the naval forces of the German Empire, are said to list 980,000 names.

Constantinople asserts that victories have been won over Russians and British, and that the movement against the Suez Canal is proceeding favorably.

Official War Reports.

GERMAN.

German Coat of Arms.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—Violent French attacks near Servon, on the western border of the Argonne, have been repulsed by our troops with heavy losses. Our losses were insignificant. In West Flanders the situation is unchanged.

"It is reported that while reconnoitring a German aeroplane squadron forced two armored aeroplanes of the enemy to land. One was shot down. One of the German aeroplanes is missing.

In the eastern theatre of war the fighting is continuing. The Admiralty reports that on the 17th our naval forces in the Baltic closed the entrance to the port of Libau by sinking ships. They then bombarded important military establishments. Destroyers rushing into the interior of the port found that no Russian warships were in the harbor.

Constantinople reports that the Turkish army is advancing in Northern Persia and has crossed the frontier of the province of Azerbeidjan.

AUSTRIAN.

Austrian Coat of Arms.

VIENNA, Nov. 21.—The attempt of the Russians to bring reserved clothing to the southern side of Przemysl and to make a grand assault on that fortress have been repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy. The Russians were forced to fall back and our troops are following up their advantage.

There has been no decisive battle in Russian Poland but everywhere our troops and the Germans have been successful in their advance.

RUSSIAN.

Russian Coat of Arms.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 21. — The German attempts to break through our armies in Poland have been severely checked which, according to present indications, is likely to have decisive consequences for the enemy.

The capture of a battery northwest of Lodz is extremely significant. It means that a Russian flanking movement has been partially successful in the direction of Pietrkow. The Germans have sustained severe reverses in that district, owing to the large reinforcements rushed to our troops.

Although the Germans are advancing along both banks of the Vistula and have gained some points within a few marches of Warsaw, the Russians will continue to retire until the place fixed upon by Grand Duke Nicholas for the final battle is reached.

The fight is now intensifying at both ends of a position, 400 miles long. Some definite result of the present operations from Thorn to Cracow will soon be known."

East Boston Man Suicide.

John Bononno, twenty-one, committed suicide in his home at No. 958 Saratoga street, East Boston, by inhaling illuminating gas.

WHEELER NOW SUES FOR DIVORCE FROM CLAUDIA CARLSTEDT

Mrs. Wheeler Tells How to Be Happy Though Married

"A woman may love a man as deeply as she pleases, provided she does not set him on a pedestal and fall down on her knees and worship him.

"Let her tell him of her love, but she must not let him, in receiving that love, get her soul at the same time.

"Do for him as for others, but do not make the mistake of doing for him alone.

"If I had followed these precepts I would now be happy."

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—After many chequered chapters of matrimonial turbulance, Mrs. Albert Gallatin Wheeler, Jr., formerly Claudia Carlstedt of stage fame, was served, a process servers say, with papers in a suit for absolute divorce brought by her husband, who is a son of the elderly Chicago millionaire of the same name, and from whom she obtained a separation in 1910.

The marital difficulties of the Wheeler scion and his wife have, within the past few years, furnished many columns of interesting news matter.

Meantime, it seems, has trailed the beautiful woman, who, in 1898, set theatregoers awhirl with her dazzling beauty and charming vocal voice. In her apartments at the McAlpin Hotel, process servers say they located her and placed in her hands papers accusing her and Walter N. Greene of this city. The papers in the suit charge Mrs. Wheeler with visiting a number of hotels.

In 1898, shortly after her marriage to Wheeler, she came to New York, and at the time it was asserted that the couple carried with them a satchel containing one million dollars in securities. In 1910, after a spectacular suit here in New York, Mrs. Wheeler obtained a separation and $10,000 alimony from her husband, charging him with desertion. Later the alimony was halved by the courts.

Once when she was asked her reasons for parting from her multi-millionaire husband, she said: "I loved my husband too much. It almost the life of a recluse with my love sitting out in my heart. My husband and his friends treated me as a baby. They thought I had no intelligence."

Last spring Mrs. Wheeler announced that she intended to sue her rich father-in-law in Chicago for the loss of her husband's love. One million dollars she said she was going to sue.

Her husband is a stock broker, whose father is at the head of the corporation that built the Chicago subways.

GAVE HIS LIFE TO SAVE STORE FUNDS

Charles J. Merrill Drops Mortally Wounded When He Defied Bandits.

robber who shot Merrill may have interpreted some movement on the manager's part as an attempt to reach a gun.

"But there was no weapon in the store," Mr. Hitchcock said. "I intend as a result of this terrible tragedy to buy two automatic revolvers and to instruct my clerks to shoot first and argue afterward if anything of this kind occurs again. I don't intend to take any further chances."

CAUSED INSTANT DEATH.

Dr. S. E. Davis, who examined Merrill's body, said today:

"I believe Merrill died almost instantly. The bullet entered his breast, penetrated his lung and lodged in his spinal column, causing instant paralysis and probably instant death."

Medical Examiner Cutts viewed the body before it was removed to the undertaking rooms.

An additional pathos is added to the tragedy by the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Merrill were on Monday to celebrate the sixteenth anniversary of their marriage. They were devoted husband and wife, and they had planned to go away for a short honeymoon by way of celebration. Mrs. Merrill often came to the drug store in the evening to go home with her husband, and last evening arrived there shortly after the shooting, little dreamt of the tragedy. She found a crowd gathered outside the door.

"Oh, what's the matter?" she asked a bystander.

"Man shot," he replied. "Boss of the store."

"Oh—shot. Oh, it wasn't Mr. Hitchcock, was it?"

Hitchcock is the owner of the store.

"No," her informant answered. "It was the light-haired fellow."

The "light-haired fellow" was Mrs. Merrill's husband, and when the dreadful realization came to her, she became hysterical and was taken to her home.

STORY OF BANDIT SLAYING BRAVE DRUGSTORE CLERK

The shooting of Charles J. Merrill in the Hitchcock drug store on Beacon street was the most dramatic tragedy Boston has had since the murder of Inspector Thomas Norton in the Boylston Cafe by "Diamond Chip" Robinson. The slayer of Merrill displayed the same cold-blooded ferocity which characterized Robinson.

It was about 9 o'clock last evening. The neighborhood was quiet, few pedestrians on the street. Mrs. Mabel Hansen, who has a candy store next the drug store, had noticed two men standing in front of her door. She heard one of them say to the other: "No use going into this place. It's too quiet." Then they turned away.

In the drug store there were no customers at the moment. Charles J. Merrill, the manager, was behind the prescription desk, and Reginald C. Pickett, a boy of sixteen, and George W. Slossen, the two clerks in the store, had stepped back to talk with him. Thus they were all grouped behind the prescription counter, when a man entered the front door of the store.

Slossen went to attend him, and the other two men remained by the prescription counter. When Slossen came to where the man was standing at the counter, the "customer" lifted a revolver into sight over the counter, stuck it against Slossen's breast and whispered, "Hold up your hands."

Slossen obeyed.

CLERKS "COVERED."

It is probable that Merrill and Pickett would have noticed this had not a man entered the side door, just by the prescription counter at the moment Slossen's hands went into the air. This man had a revolver ready in his hand, and he covered Merrill and Pickett with it. There is a small open space behind the counter, with a desk, and the safe—the door of which swung open. In this safe were the day's receipts.

For a moment the three stood facing each other—Merrill and Pickett side by side, the man with the revolver covering them. Then he growled:

"Put up your hands."

Merrill was stunned. Merrill was the first to recover. His wits worked like a flash. He remembered the money in the open safe behind him. And he acted to save that money.

"What is this, a joke?" he laughed—and at the same moment lifted his foot, found the open safe door behind him and kicked it shut.

The intruder started forward as though to catch the safe door, but he was too late, and he turned on Merrill. "No, d—— you, it's no joke for you," he rasped—and with the word his gun spat flame.

So near was he to Merrill that Merrill's coat was singed by the discharge. The lance of fire from the revolver mouth struck Merrill's breast and he collapsed with a choking sob. He had saved his employer's funds at the cost of his own life. When the doctors arrived he was dead.

"ALL RIGHT, JACK, BEAT IT."

Young Pickett, perhaps inspired by his chief's heroism, ignored the revolver of the slayer who stood over his victim, and sprang to a telephone on the counter. While he rattled the hook to get central, the yegg gave him a passing look, then stepped to the front of the store. Slossen was still there, his hands in the air, the revolver against his breast.

The man who had shot Merrill went behind the counter on the other side of the store and deliberately rifled the cash drawers of three cash registers and the till of the candy counter. He collected about $18. Then he called to his companion:

"All right, Jack, beat it."

The other man took his revolver from Slossen's breast, dropped it into his pocket and followed his leader out of the store. The two turned down St. Mary's street, reached the Boston & Albany tracks a hundred yards away, and disappeared before any officers arrived on the scene.

DESCRIPTION OF MERRILL SLAYERS

The man who did the shooting is thus described:

Height—Five feet eleven inches.

Complexion—Dark and swarthy.

Clothing—Dark suit and dark slouch hat.

The other man was about twenty-three years old, wore a dark brown suit and light golf cap and was of medium build. The clerks describe both of the men as "dirty looking."

The tragedy came very swiftly. The robbers entered the store, one at the front door and one at the side. Slossen went to wait on the man at the front—and a revolver greeted him. The other robber covered Merrill and Reginald C. Pickett, a sixteen-year-old clerk.

"What is this, a joke?" asked Merrill—and kicked the door of the safe, and closing it in a determination to serve his employer's interests.

"No, d—— you, it's no joke for you"—and fired.

SUSPECTS FREED.

The Brookline police arrived promptly and made strenuous efforts to get trace of the men, but they were unsuccessful. The man who did the shooting is described as dark and swarthy, about five feet eleven inches tall, and dressed in dark clothing. The other man was about twenty-three years old, wore a dark suit and light cap. Both of the men are described as "dirty looking."

The three suspects arrested on Hanover street early today and who, after questioning had seen them, were exonerated of connection with the crime are Joseph Lemo, thirty-five, of No. 228 Hushwick avenue, Brooklyn, charged with carrying a load of jewelry; Barnett De George, thirty, of No. 199 School street, Brooklyn, and Luigi Lacaro, forty-six, of Charter street, North End.

Merrill, who was forty, lived at No. 42 Ivy street, Back Bay.

ALARM SCARES MAN ATTEMPTING TO ROB FEDERAL ST. STORE

An attempt was made to burglarize the liquor store of John F. Callahan at No. 160 Federal street, but the intruder was frightened away by the sounding of an alarm by the American District Telegraph Company burglar alarm.

Police investigation showed that the intruder had entered the vacant building at No. 45 High street, which backs up to the Callahan building. From this place he went to a fire escape and broke a window on the second floor of the liquor establishment.

HUNT ARMED YEGGS, WHO FLEE AFTER ROBBING STORE

The police are searching for two armed men, who held up John Kelley, a clerk in the store of the Fort Hill Wine Company, Atlantic avenue, at the point of revolvers, and robbed the cash register of $55.

Kelley was about to wrap a package, which one of the men had ordered, when a gun was shoved into his face. He was ordered to throw his hands up. He was backed to a rear room and forced to leave by a window

HUNT BAND OF PURSE THIEVES IN SOMERVILLE

Two cases of purse-snatching from Somerville women on the same night have alarmed women and girls of that city and started the police on a systematic hunt for what they believe is an organized gang.

The purse-snatchers are believed to be more desperate than the ordinary run of these law-breakers because one woman, who resisted, was struck with a blunt instrument and nearly stunned.

Women are so alarmed by the two cases that they shrink from going out evenings, even for brief walks, unless accompanied by male escorts.

Miss Louise Blake of No. 21 Derby street was walking along Grant street when a man snatched at her handbag. Miss Blake bravely resisted his attempts. Suddenly she was struck on the head with a blackjack or similar weapon. She staggered and nearly became unconscious. With her remaining strength she managed to scream for help. Her assailant ran when seen, men who heard her cries, came on the run.

At nearly the same hour a Mrs. Holmquist was held up and robbed on Oliver street by a man who jumped at her from behind a tree. Her handbag was stolen. It contained a pair of shoes, shawl, two railroad tickets to Wellesley and $1.52.

Lord Roberts on the War

England's great General, shortly before his death, wrote a remarkable article on the great war, which will be printed in full in

Tomorrow's Boston Sunday AMERICAN

"And for the United States of America, what would the triumph of Germany mean?"

—Asks the late Lord Roberts, who wrote a remarkable article on the war shortly before his death.

This article will appear in full in Tomorrow's Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

HEARTY RESPONSE TO 'GIVE A BASKET' CALL SHOWS XMAS SPIRIT

Boston is overflowing with the real Christmas spirit.

This is shown, beyond question, by the large and varied response to the AMERICAN'S "Give a Basket" plan to provide Christmas dinners and other Yule-tide joys for the city's worthy poor.

Letters commending this plan are coming in with every mail to the AMERICAN'S Christmas Editor.

People telephone in words of praise. They drop in at the AMERICAN office and say splendid things about it.

Not words alone.

The letters of praise contain checks or cash. These contributions range from a dollar up, according to the means of the givers.

Some donors, instead of sending money or checks, notify the Christmas Editor of their intention to furnish one or more baskets, filled with Christmas dinner materials. The AMERICAN gives a schedule of provisions needed for an average family, which can be provided for $2.

Other people are giving or arranging to give presents, to be put in the baskets.

BOOKS AND APPLES GIVEN.

A. Shuman will send ten barrels of apples.

Louis C. Page, the publisher, will give 100 Christmas books for children.

One of the most enthusiastic endorsements of the "Give a Basket" plan comes from Mrs. Hughes Reid Griffin, former regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution in London, who praises the plan, both for native and method.

Secretary Eben Burnstead of the Massachusetts Civic Alliance says of the plan: "Push it."

And so they come—praise, checks, cash, pledges of cash, gifts and all sorts of encouragement, to let the Christmas Editor know that the heart of the Greater Boston public beats warmly and its purse opens quickly to Christmas appeal.

It is noticeable how many people are thinking of little children when they write or talk of the "Give a Basket" plan. The Christmas dinner is a family affair and people realize that families must be fed—especially at Christmas.

But constant allusions to the children and the need of brightening the "diddies'" lives crop out in letters and statements. They show that none can bear, of all things, the thought of a child desolate at Christmas.

It seems to be a pretty good old world in spots anyhow, war or no war.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.

James H. Baldwin, attorney in the Kimball Building, writes:

November 19, 1914.

Christmas Editor, American:

I heartily approve of the undertaking of the Boston AMERICAN for furnishing Christmas necessities and joy to the poor at home. I also believe that charity begins at home.

I sincerely trust that my donation may afford some poor family comfort and gladness on Christmas Day.

Very truly yours,
JAMES H. BALDWIN.

A NEW MEANING.

President John R. McVey of het Old South Trust Company, in sending a $25 check, writes:

Christmas Editor, AMERICAN:

Sir—No more humane plan than that of the AMERICAN, in its "Give a Basket" agitation, ever was started in this city.

How best to relieve the immediate wants of Boston's poor on Christmas, as so strongly outlined in Mayor Curley's letter to the AMERICAN endorsing this plan, ought to be our foremost thought today.

Christmas to the poor and needy of our city will have a deeper, a more significant meaning this year, if every citizen in a position to do so will help push this good work along.

Kindly accept the enclosed check for $25 to buy ten Christmas dinner baskets for ten families and $5 worth of toys for their little children.

Very truly yours,
JOHN R. M'VEY.

PUSH IT ALONG.

Secretary Burnstead of the Massachusetts Civic Alliance says:

My self means push the basket plan for Christmas. Get into touch with the deserving and give them something to make them think there is good cheer in the world and some one is willing to make it known. The Boston AMERICAN scheme of observing Christmas and making Santa Claus real to many people is worthy of a generous support and I shall see that it has it.

William T. A. Fitzgerald, Register of Deeds of Suffolk County and vice-president of the City Club, said, in making his donation:

It is very commendable for the AMERICAN to provide sustenance for those unable to provide for themselves at the Christmas season and during the prevailing hard times.

DARTMOUTH-SYRACUSE IN GRIDIRON BATTLE AT FENWAY PARK TODAY

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

WALTER CAMP TELLS HOW COLLEGE FOOTBALL HAS MADE GREAT STRIDES

YELLE IS SURE HE WILL WIN WELSH AWARD

FREDDY YELLE, who meets Freddie Welsh at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday evening, is in high spirits today as a result of the victory scored by Jimmy Duffy over the champion at Buffalo, and the Taunton boy says he will also win.

"If Duffy can gain the best of a ten-round bout with the world's champion, I fail to see why I can't make equally as well a showing, if not a better fight than Duffy," said Yelle today.

"Few realize how I feel about my meeting with Welsh. If there was ever a time when I felt more confident of being returned a winner I do not remember. Welsh may be the exception at that, but I am not overlooking the facts attending the meeting.

"There is not a thing that I fear in this meeting, and if I do not win I will be disappointed, as I intend to supply Welsh with as fast a fight as he has ever been called upon to make."

* * *

THE club has won great favor with the sports by adhering to the regular price for this next Tuesday night's entertainment, and it is certain that the greatest crowd that ever saw a lightweight championship contest will attend.

There is great interest in the preliminary bouts. Neah Brusso—Yelle's sparring partner—will meet Patsy DeLucca in the semi-final of eight rounds. The other two bouts are made up between popular boxers.

* * *

GILBERT GALLANT, the popular Chelsea lightweight, is going to be a busy individual within the next couple of weeks if he accepts all of fers he has received.

Gallant made his mark by his two victories over Leach Cross, who is regarded among the foremost lightweights of the country. Some of the critics were a bit doubtful after Gilbert's first win over Cross at the Atlas A. A. some weeks ago, but when the Chelsea boy went over to New York and decisively beat Cross in his own camp, knocking him down twice during the bout, they began to realise that he was a real fighter, made of championship calibre.

* * *

PROMOTER FRANK MULKERN of Milwaukee today offered Alec McLean, Gallant's manager, asking him to name his terms for a bout between his boy and Gilbert, which the clever New York featherweight to take place in the Wisconsin city on November 30.

Charley White of Chicago and Johnny Kilbane were originally scheduled for box there on the aforementioned date, but the former pulled out of the bout, preferring to await the outcome of Kilbane's fight with Joe Mandot before going against the featherweight king.

Mulkern is anxious to land a good card for the 30th, and as the time is drawing near, he will match Gilbert Gallant and Dundee a good, stiff price for their services.

* * *

GALLANT also has two offers to box 10 December 7. The Atlas Club of this city is after him, as is a New York promoter. Gallant made such a hit in his boxing debut in New York over there are anxious to see more of him. If McLean accepts the New York offer Gallant will probably box Willie Beecher.

Bridgeport, Ct., is after Gallant for December 14. The sporting promoter of that town wants Gilbert to meet the winner of the bout between Frankie Black of Beachmont and Young Shugrue, the hard-hitting New Jersey boy.

McLean stated today that he would box his protege where the best inducements were offered.

Carlson Won Special Bout at Brockton

BROCKTON, Nov. 21.—Nineteen fast amateur bouts were staged at Clark Hall here under the auspices of the S. P. T. A. Society.

A special bout between two local boys, Harry Carlson and Johnny Gill, was won by the former.

The feature clash was that between Frank Ryan of Medford and John Roberts of Cambridge, who in desperate finish Ryan won.

The summary:

115-pound class—Charles Dauncey of Revere defeated G. Fall of Somerville.

120-pound class—Frank Ryan of Medford defeated John Roberts of Cambridge.

Special bout, 125-pound class—Harry Carlson of Brockton defeated Johnny McGrath of Brockton.

145-pound class—George Downey of Brockton defeated Harry Miller of South Boston.

Magirl's Late Rally Won Pierson Bout

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Nov. 21.—Art Magirl, the Oklahoma city 152-pounder, after getting off to a fast start in his ten-round bout with Charlie Pierson, Kansas City, at the Wittington Park A. C., did the superior thing from the third round on and won the decision.

In the semi-final Battling Burley, the undefeated Hot Springs welterweight, gave Tony Lofini of Kansas City a good trouncing in eight rounds.

Banks Leads Jordan in Checker Play

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 21.—Newell W. Banks of Detroit, American checker champion, took the lead over Alfred Jordan of Canada, present world's champion, by winning a game in the world's championship series here. Three draws were recorded also. In the twenty games played Jordan has won one, Banks two and seventeen were drawn.

Robinson Gets Draw.

BIDDEFORD, Me., Nov. 21.—George Robinson of Cambridge and Bob Lefavour of Fall River fought to a draw in a double, six-round bout at the Old Armory. The bout was a fast one throughout.

20,000 SEE GREEN PLAY SYRACUSE

Dartmouth's big eleven and the sturdy team from Syracuse clash at Fenway Park today. It is the first meeting of these two great gridiron machines and the game is sharing interest with the big Yale-Harvard battle at the new Yale bowl down in New Haven.

Plans have been completed for the handling of a "world's series" crowd, for more than 20,000 are expected.

Dartmouth has one of the most versatile football teams turned out at Hanover since Frank Cavanaugh took charge of the squad there five years ago.

It has defeated such teams as Pennsylvania, Vermont, Williams, Norwich and Tufts, and its only reverse was sustained at Princeton.

With the exception of the Princeton game, Dartmouth has played in championship form.

Syracuse has been beaten but once this Fall, and that setback was administered by Princeton. Rutgers and Syracuse played a 14-to-14 tie, and last Saturday Syracuse and Colgate played a scoreless game.

The odds are 10 to 8 on Dartmouth to defeat Syracuse, but comparatively little Syracuse money was in sight.

Syracuse University coaches and players arrived from the Salt City early yesterday and went directly to the Copley Square Hotel. After eating the squad scattered, many of the players accompanying the coaches, F. C. (Chick) O'Neil and Frank H. O'Neil, to the quarters of the Boston Athletic Association on Exeter street.

The afternoon program consisted of light work on the gridiron at Fenway Park, and the twenty-four players reporting for a light workout.

Nothing of a strenuous nature was attempted, the coaches being satisfied by putting the men through a warming-up practice.

Incidentally, although the coaches are named alike, they are not related, both having been graduated from Syracuse in 1901.

Dartmouth's band arrived at the Woodland Park Hotel in time for their evening meal, Head Coach Cavanaugh reporting "all O. K. physically." No definite program has been laid out for the squad, although an early journey to the Fenway grounds is likely.

GREEN ROOTERS ARRIVE.

They will find that the gridiron has been marked, that the scoreboard—similar to the one in use at the Stadium—has been erected, and that everything is in readiness for the afternoon contest.

The entire student body at Dartmouth left Hanover at 10 o'clock this morning to cheer the big Green team in their efforts against the Empire State team.

Graduate Manager Murray S. Stedman of Syracuse, who has been in Boston since Wednesday looking after the preliminary arrangements, has been fairly flooded with telegrams from Syracuse graduates requesting that he hold reserved seats in the Syracuse cheering section.

The number of requests has exceeded the expectations, and early Mr. Stedman declared that it is doubtful if all of the Salt City rooters will be able to be supplied with pasteboards admitting to the section set aside for the Syracusans.

All the accouterments that add so much to the spectacular setting of a college football game have been supplied. The layout of the gridiron is different than that used in the many schoolboy games this season.

The goal posts are near the catcher's box and in right-centre field. The boat seats probably will be found in the right-field section of the baseball pavilion, near the reserved grandstand section.

All of the seats in the pavilion have been reserved, and the stencilling was completed yesterday morning.

Announcements will be made while the game is in progress as to the manner in which the Harvard and Yale elevens are dedicating the new Yale bowl.

TWO LIVEMEN FAVORITES.

Many interesting individual battles will be fought out on the Fenway gridiron this afternoon when the rival teams meet for the first time.

Members of the opposing teams sing the praises of one of their bulky linemen, Dartmouth believing that Spears, the conqueror of Shenk of Princeton and Dorias of Penn, will check the advance of anything Syracuse can unleash.

Big faith is taken in the New Yorkers pin their faith on Schlaecter, the slight guard, who has proved himself to be the best lineman developed in the college ranks this year.

The coaches have instructed their players so that these two men appear against each other in the lineup. But that does not mean that the men will often clash.

Dartmouth often makes use, while on the offensive, of the shift in vogue at Harvard by which the two guards play side by side.

This will mean that the mighty guards of the Green and Orange eleven will have to cut a swath through other portions of the line and that their defensive work will find them head together, yet far apart.

For Spears will be engaged with whose player other than Schlaeter and vice versa.

SOME NEW SYRACUSE PLAYS.

White, the tallest man in college football, will play left end for Syracuse and the Orange University rooters place great dependence on this giant.

White measures six-feet six from head to toes, and his prodigious reach will make him a valuable interceptor of forward passes.

Captain Shubert of Syracuse, who has been playing end, will be the snapper-back today. This shift, which was one of those made at the time of the big shake-up earlier this week, was necessitated by an injury to Forsyth, the regular centre.

The latter was the only Syracuse player unable to come to Boston with the squad. The centre trio will be often hurled beneath the heads of linemen, but they should be well worth watching.

That Syracuse will fight hard is certain, for the Orange is anxious to continue the athletic relations with the Green. Dartmouth, with one of the best teams in its history, would be in a position to claim collegiate honors had its showing against Princeton been steadier.

But Captain Whitney's team did not strike its stride until the Tufts game and continued its wonderful work by completely annihilating Pomfret by the biggest margin Penn has been beaten in years.

Captain Harry Kiley, the halfback, and Dan O'Connor, the giant tackle, were left behind when the Boston College squad left for New York yesterday to line up against Fordham today.

Kiley's injured shoulder keeps him out of the game, and O'Connor has a sprained ankle. Coach Mahoney preferred to keep both men out rather than run a chance of having them lost for the big Thanksgiving Day game with the Catholic University of Washington.

Joe Dee, the halfback, who played his first game of the season against Holy Cross last Saturday, is playing a star game and is expected to make up for Kiley's loss.

The Fordham team has made a good showing this year and will be anxious to defeat their since Fordham came from Boston. Last year the teams fought it out to a 27 to 27 tie in a fast game. The Boston players hope to do much better this year.

Schaefer Beaten in Billiard Match by Boston Favorite

Albert Cutler, the Boston billiard player, is receiving all kinds of warm praise from his many friends today following his hard-earned victory over young Jake Schaefer in the two-day billiard match at the Imperial parlors, which closed last evening.

Cutler won the opening match, but in the second meeting the young champion came out on the long end, a score of 300 to 269. In the final session the Boston favorite came back strong and won by the narrow margin of eleven points, the final score standing 300 to 289.

Holy Cross Rests for Vermont Game

WORCESTER, Nov. 21.—Not wishing to take any chances on injuring his men for the final game of the season, Coach Kelley decided to eliminate scrimmages from now until the "Turkey Day" battle with Vermont.

Blackboard talks, both on perfecting the offense and showing each man his position against the different Vermont formation is the daily program.

It is hardly probable now that Barney Lee, the fleet left halfback, will be fit to play again this year.

Bresnahan Plans Some Cub Trades

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—A series of trades, planned with the idea of strengthening the infield of the Chicago Nationals, will be made, it possible, by Roger Bresnahan, who has assumed his duties as manager.

Bresnahan said he hoped to reduce to twenty-one players the squad on the club's payroll, now numbering thirty-four.

Rumors that Zimmerman might be traded owing to the alleged unfriendly feelings between him and the new leader were denied. Bresnahan says he thought too much of the third baseman to let him go.

The annual Boston College High-St. John's Prep game is played today at Canary park. These two schools are the only Catholic academies in this section and both support top-notch elevens this Fall.

St. John's has a rather better record and has had always the pick of the local aggregation.

With Buck Donahue and Hiker Joy both working their heads off to develop the team the James street lads are today at their height of efficiency. St. John's is favored to win by a small margin.

Power Boat Race on Program for Coast Exposition

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—Officials of the Panama-Pacific international exposition have received from the local section of the American Power Boat Association the program of the motor boat regatta to be held here next year.

In addition to a long-distance race from New York to San Francisco, which has already attracted four entries, the plans indicate two weeks of racing, to take in every type of gas-propelled boat, including cruisers, express and heavy duty, displacement and hydroplane speed boats, fishing and open boats.

While all events will be under the auspices of the American Power Boat Association entries from all other motor boat organizations will be accepted.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Edward M. Corrigan, who owned the Hawthorne race track here when racing was in the heyday, and at one time a dominant figure on the American turf, was married Tuesday at Crown Point, Ind., to Miss Alice M. Pickett of Chicago, according to a report just received here.

Mr. Corrigan, according to the story, gave his age as sixty years. His bride gave hers as twenty-one.

Both teams have been practicing for nearly a month, and since the end of the varsity season have been greatly strengthened by the addition of a number of seasoned second string players.

The teams appear to be evenly balanced and the game should develop into one of the best interclass contests held on the hill in many years.

The sophomore team is captained by Ela, who formerly played for Boston Latin, while the freshmen are led by O'Mara, who made a good showing at Dean Academy some years ago.

As the game is the third in the series of athletic contests for the freshman class flags, each class already having taken one event, there is a great incentive to each team to pile up another brace of points that their class may have a comfortable lead when the basketball teams meet after the Thanksgiving recess.

Thanksgiving Mat Carnival a Real Battle of Giants

Waldek Zbyszko, the international wrestling champion, today settled beyond doubt that he would be a principal in one of the three big wrestling contests that will make up the Thanksgiving night program in Mechanics Building.

Zbyszko called on Promoter Tuohey and after going over some of the minor details of the articles, arrived at complete understanding. Zbyszko will be paired with Franz Hockmann, the clever big German youth.

Hockman was the winner of the Montevideo tourney. He is a young giant in his prime and is confident that he will win over the young Polish champion.

In the two matches George Lurich will tackle Arvidson, the Swede, and Isando Bey will meet Pierrard, the Belgian. All three matches will go to a finish, best two out of three falls, under catch-as-catch-can rules.

CAMP TELLS HOW GREAT GRIDIRON GAME HAS GROWN

By WALTER CAMP.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 21.—As it is said, "All roads lead to Rome," so today most roads of the football enthusiast lead to the great new "bowl" on the Yale field.

Here they will find a huge dish-shaped structure, looking from the outside like a grass mound fortification, but as one passes through any one of the thirty concrete portals which pierce the greensward banks, he will find himself facing over seventy thousand people who, today, the world and the war forgotten, will centre their hopes, interests and attention upon an engrossing observation of the little oblong of bright green turf which makes up the bottom of this huge "Bowl."

There the elevens of Harvard and Yale will battle for supremacy, and the match will be worthy of the occasion and the opening of this unique coliseum.

FIRST GAME IN 1876.

And from what has all this grown? In 1876 Captain Baker of the Yale team met Captain Whiting of Harvard, and acting Captain Curtis, and arranged for a game under strictly Rugby union rules, to be played between Harvard and Yale.

The referee was "Sam" Bushnell, now the Reverend Samuel C. Bushnell of Arlington, Mass. The game was played at Hamilton Park, New Haven, and an enormous crowd for that day—a thousand people—stood around the sides of the field and watched the game!

A game was played the same year with Princeton on what was then known as the Elysian Fields, Hoboken, St. George's cricket grounds.

Most of the spectators, who numbered a few hundred, avoided paying admission by coming in through a hole in the fence.

The result was that the team had no funds to buy a dinner in New York, and the president of the association, Fred B. Percy, of Bath, Me., put up the money to give the team a good dinner at Delmonico's, which was immensely appreciated!

PLAYED IN HAMILTON PARK.

Until the early 80's Yale's games were played at the field in Hamilton Park, and then transferred to a field on Derby avenue, then known as the "new" Yale field, but now the "old" Yale field.

Some thirty acres of ground was purchased there and for several years football was played with merely a rope around the field, the crowd all standing.

Then the big games were transferred to Springfield, where stands accommodating some fifteen or sixteen thousand people were erected.

With the desire which came from expression of the faculties that college games be played on college grounds, the big game was transferred to New Haven, where in alternate years Harvard and Princeton were to be met.

Stands seating some eighteen or twenty thousand people were erected. These stands were added to and increased year by year until last year they would seat some thirty-seven thousand people.

MORE ROOM NECESSARY.

But the demand for seats had grown so out of proportion with this expansion that it seemed necessary to build a new structure that should seat at least sixty thousand. But that the accommodation for even over seventy thousand is not sufficient is made already clear.

Today will see just what the effect is of nearly doubling the crowd that comes to New Haven for a contest of this kind. Not only the steam road facilities but the trolley facilities and even the approaches will be subjected to a strain. How they will bear it is another question.

The chances are that with the novelty of the scheme and the desire of the people to see the "bowl," the crowd will be good enough to arrive early and proceed to the field early.

Of course, if seventy thousand people decide to go out at half past one to witness a game to be played at two, there would be a riot, but this is unlikely if people are satisfied to take their time in coming out, and if the day is fine everything promises to go without a hitch.

As a matter of precaution, it would be well for those intending to see the game to look over the above diagram which shows them the various approaches and also the numberings of the portals to that they can readily find their sections.

WHO'S WHO ON HARVARD

CHARLES E. BRICKLEY, captain and full back, who will not get into the game unless to kick a goal from placement, because he is just recovering from the effects of an operation for appendicitis, has been a regular and the brightest kind of a star on the Harvard team for three years. His home is in Everett and first came into the gridiron limelight as a star kicker and back on Everett High. He followed with two years on the Exeter eleven and was captain of the Harvard freshmen. For the past two years his wonderful drop kicking ability has enabled Harvard to down Yale. Brickley is also a star track athlete and was formerly New England champion at the hop, step and jump. He is twenty-two years old, weighs 198 pounds and stands 5 feet 8 inches.

T. J. COOLIDGE, left end, is a senior, on the squad for the third year. He has never made the team previously, although for the past two years he has been a first string sub. He is a husky, rangy wing guardian, standing 5 feet 11¾ inches and weighing 175 pounds. He prepared at Milton School for Harvard and was also a star on Brickley's freshman team.

K. B. G. PARSON, left tackle, is a Providence youth, who prepared for Harvard at the Hope Street High School, at which institution he was a star lineaman on the football team. This is his first year on the Crimson squad. He has the ideal build for a tackle, and in another year should develop into an All-America possibility. He is twenty-two years old, 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 187 pounds.

M. A. WATSON, left guard, is another of the seniors on the team. For the past three years he has been threatening to break into the regular line, but this season gave him his first chance, when the injuries to Trumbull and Pennock made an opening for him. He procured his gridiron rudimentary instruction at Noble & Greenough school. He is a resident of Brookline, is twenty-one years old, tips the beam at 194 and stands 6 feet 3½ inches.

DANA J. WALLACE, centre, is from the far west, claiming San Francisco as his home. He prepared for Harvard at the University of Southern California, and is a second year man on the outfit. Though somewhat light, he weighs but 174, his fighting ability has made him one of the most valuable men in the Harvard line. He is twenty-one years of age and measures 5 feet 11 inches.

STANLEY B. PENNOCK, right guard, is one of the greatest linesmen in the game today, and for two years has been picked on Walter Camp's All-America eleven. It was his absence as much as anything else that made the team apparently weak in mid-season. Pennock, who is Captain Brickley's room mate, and who is on his third year on the varsity, comes from Syracuse, N. Y., and gained his collegiate training at Hackley School. He tips the beam at 202 pounds, and is 6 feet 2 inches from head to toe. Also he has been around for some twenty-two years.

WALTER H. TRUMBULL, right tackle, and acting captain, is a Salem native and is a member of the senior class. He has been a varsity regular for three years and last Fall was the only member of the team, except Brickley, who was mentioned for the captaincy. The big guard is, with the exception of Pennock, the best lineman on the outfit. He made rapid progress at Middlesex School, Concord. He is one of the giants of the squad, weighing 190 pounds and being 6 feet 1¾ inches in longitude.

H. HUNTINGTON HARDWICK (TACKS), right end, is perhaps one of the greatest all-around football players on the gridiron today. For the past three years he has been starring at halfback and end for the Crimson team, in addition to being a deadly tackler, he is one of the best men on the line at carrying the ball and kicking. He is also a "U" baseball man. He prepared at Groton School and lives in Quincy. He is 6 feet 11 inches in height, weighs 171 pounds and is twenty-two years old.

MALCOLM J. LOGAN, quarterback, halfback from South Boston and first became known to the football world as a star with the Boston Latin team. He has been on the squad for three years, the first acting as substitute in the directing general. Logan is one of the most heady field generals in the game today and has the knack of getting all the power possible out of his team. He is the lightest man on the squad, weighing but 150 pounds. He was born twenty-one years ago.

FREDERICK R. BRADLEE, left halfback, is another of the Boston players on the team. He started out as a football star with St. Mark's. This is his third year on the squad, and he has always been in the backfield. He was a substitute quarterback in his first year, but has been a regular halfback since. This speedy individual is twenty-one years old, weighs 173, and is 5 feet 11½ inches tall.

EDWIN W. MAHL, right halfback, who has taken Brickley's place as the star drop kicker of the squad, is a product of Natick High School and Andover. Besides being one of the best football players at Harvard, he is also a star pitcher on the nine, and a fine sprinter and broad jumper. He will probably be captain of next year's eleven. He is twenty-two years old, weighs 170, and stands 5 feet 11 inches.

HUGO FRANCKE, fullback, is a son of Professor Kuno Francke of the Harvard faculty. Though a senior, this is his first year on the squad. When Brickley was hurt he stepped in and made good from the start. He is a fine specimen of the heavy lunging back, and in addition is a punter of no mean ability. He weighs 189 pounds, and is just three-quarters of an inch over six feet in height. He prepared for Harvard at Brown and Nichols School, is a resident of Cambridge, and twenty-two years old.

ERNEST SOUCY, sub centre and end, would undoubtedly be varsity snapper back this Fall, had it not been for a bad knee, which was wrenched in the Penn State game. He is a junior, and in addition to being a cerebral type, is a regular on the varsity crew. He was a varsity man in 1914. He first became known as an athlete at Boston Latin School. He is twenty years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 171 pounds.

What Romeo Did in the Ancient Football Game

The Harvard Lampoon, in its Harvard-Yale issue, has rewritten Shakespeare as follows:

ROMEO AND JULIET.

The Montagues and Capulets, two Universities.
In preparation for their game, were living at their case.
Excitement filled the Veronese; excitement reigned supreme.
And everyone was taking sides, and rooting for his team.

Now Romeo of Montague, the captain-quarterback,
Was in the other training camp, speaking through a crack
To try to learn their signals, which tomorrow he could use,
And thus distinctly benefit the stalwart Montagues.

While returning from this duty, in the corridor he met
The sister of the captain, and a pippin—Juliet.
To make the story shorter, they were married speedily,
By a clergyman named Laurence, self-appointed referee.

The day broke fair and frosty on the morning of the game,
And the last instructions given were, to cripple, slay or maim.
Mercutio, a Montague, was victim No. 1,
And Romeo slew Tybalt when he saw his friend was done.

To reprimand such violence the umpire's feelings yield,
And Romeo, of Montague, is ordered from the field!
Too much was this for Juliet. Emotion quite surprised her,
And they rushed her to the lockers, and to calm, anaesthetized her.

Here Romeo exiled her, and believing she was dead,
With remarkable alacrity, entirely lost his head.
He cast about for weapons, seized a flask of liniment,
And drained about a half of it, on suicide intent.

Results were as expected. He expired at her feet.
Dramatically she awoke. The tragic finish came.
A knitting needle lying near, she grasped with purpose fell,
And carved herself completely, and exceptionally well.

Game to Be Shown to Stay at Homes

Harvard stay at homes will have an opportunity to follow the Harvard-Yale football games along a miniature gridiron drawn on a large blackboard in the Union this afternoon. The Crimson has made arrangements to have one of its staff at the scene of action who is to unfold by wire each and every happening that takes place within Yale's big saucer. Representatives on the Cambridge end of the wire will take the game play by play and by means of telegraph wires in the Crimson office up to the living room of the Union, where the progress of the ball will be traced along the score board. In case of Harvard's win, the local enthusiasm will rival that at New Haven, considering the difference in the number of well wishers in both places.

Cadets Shovel Snow for Big Game Today

WEST POINT, Nov. 21.—Although the storm buried the football field here today under six inches of snow, the game between the Army and Springfield Training School will be played today.

Three hundred Cadets armed with snow shovels, brooms and yard-markers, which they had wrenched loose from the sidelines, swept the gridiron clear early today.

The game is the last in which the Army eleven will play before it meets the Navy team at Philadelphia on November 28.

Green Freshmen Win Cross-Country Run at Andover

ANDOVER, Nov. 21.—The annual invitation cross-country run at Phillips Academy was won by the Dartmouth freshmen with 40 points.

Harvard fresh was second with 44, Worcester Academy third with 85, Andover fourth with 91, and Pennsylvania fifth with 106. M. I. T. failed to finish the fifth man.

Heffinger of Harvard was the winner in 22 minutes 40 seconds, with Swift of Dartmouth second in 23 minutes 5 seconds.

The first three men were awarded cups and the winning team received a trophy. The time made was fast, considering the wretched condition of the course, which was covered with ice and snow.

The team finish:

Dartmouth Fresh	2	5	4	7	24—	40
Harvard Fresh	9	10	11	12	12—	44
Worcester Academy ..	1	3	6	15	60—	85
Andover Fresh	16	23	25	28	23—	91

The Dark Brown Papers

Why Harvard Violated the Neutrality of the New Haven—Being the Complete Text of the Official Dark Brown Papers as Compiled by the Harvard Lampoon.

WHO'S WHO IN THE CORRESPONDENCE.

Sir Percival Haughton, Harvard Charge d'affaire
M. Camp ..... Yale Premier
Francesco Lowell and Hadley ..... Yale Premier
Titular Heads of the Governments in question

Letter No. 1, Sir P. Haughton to Hon. Lowell.

Sir: I had conference with that
——— (deleted by censor)
Camp last night and entreated him to use all his ——— influence to avert the threatened debacle to its men. I asked him for an explanation of the mysterious disappearance of our Captain Brickley's appendix, and intimated that if a satisfactory answer was not forthcoming before tiffin-time on Friday our forces would mobilize quicker than you could say Robinson Hull, and violate his ——— neutrality so that he never could use it again.

He replied that under the Hofbrau Convention of 1913, relating to the intestinal disturbances of a belligerent, it was expressly stated that any inflammatory organ, either before or after operations began, was liable to cure as conditional contraband. I replied that, in spite of this, he and his neutrality could jolly well ———

I am reliably informed that the Yale Reserves from the Dental, Divinity and Forestry Schools have been impressed, and that the entire class of 1915 at Andover has been graduated six months in advance to fight for (deleted) for Country and for Yale.

No. 2. Hon. Lowell to Hon. Hadley, November 18.

Sir: P. Haughton informs me that he has strained his relations with you. I regret that conditions necessitate steps of the most drastic nature, and that, pending your kind reply, we are now making preparations for a purely defensive movement on New Haven.

No. 3. Hon. Hadley to Hon. Lowell, November 20.

I have the honor of calling your attention to Article 5 of the Hofbrau Convention—Revision—Main Schedule East of New London and Willimantic. It is at once evident that the passage of the Harvard Lanthorn through Providence will be looked upon as a gross violation of Brown University's neutrality. I need hardly say that such an infringement of Brown's territorial integrity would be regarded in the light of a regrettable incident.

No. 4. Hon. Lowell to Hon. Hadley, November 21.

At secret practice of the Board of Overseers it was decided that under the present indicted condition of the New York, New Haven and Harvard Rah Rah, its timetable cannot be regarded otherwise than as a mere scrap of paper. It has been my privilege to ask Mr. Cram to hand the University Team their passports.

No. 5. Hon. Hadley to Hon. Lowell, November 22.

I have the honor of submitting the following memoranda relating to the alleged atrocities perpetrated by Haughton's Huns on Yale Field yesterday afternoon. It is the report of an eye-witness of said atrocities in the Weekly Motogravure Supplement of the Harvard Graduates' Magazine.

No. 1. The proven tackling of a Dum-Dum by the Harvard squad.

No. 2. The dropping of punts by unidentified backs.

No. 3. Placing floating mines in the Charles River Basin.

No. 4. We offer a $5000 indemnity for the funniest atrocity not exceeding twenty-five words, or to any one of our young readers, their name and address to be written in either right hand corner, or for the best answer to any one of the following questions:

1. Are your Flanders inflamed?
2. How often does your Antwarp?
3. Have you Jellicoe's veins?

No. 6. Proclamation of Neutrality.

I, the Curator of the Brooklyn Pyrotechnical Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, do hereby enjoin all my pupils to maintain the most bland neutrality in the present tense situation in New Haven.

This does not mean that you are not to talk to yourself on the subject, no matter how hoarse yourself you may be, provided that you contain yourself.

It does mean, however, that in all the trivial duties of the day, such as winding behind your ears or running up bills, you work together for University peace.

Victory Over Yale Brickley Asks as Birthday Present

Captain Charley Brickley of the Harvard football team will be twenty-three years old next Tuesday. And Charley has button-holed each member of Harvard's big eleven and asked a great favor of his fellow players.

It is nothing less than a rousing victory over the Yale Bulldog and each chap, as he wrings his captain's hand, declared that their leader would certainly get his birthday present.

In the past two seasons Charley's unequalled right foot, which brought him lasting college fame, has been able to make the observance of his natal day a particularly happy one, but it is doubtful if the old Master will be able to clutch and fight with his old fearlessness for Alma Mater, after he has had a canvass of his playmates for this most auspicious of birthday gifts —a victory over Yale.

Roxbury-Dorchester Battle on Gridiron

The St Alphonsus football team plays the Rambler A. C. today at the Gibson street playgrounds. The Rambler team is considered the strongest of the teams in the Dorchester section, and as great rivalry exists between the Roxbury and Dorchester sections over this contest, a large and enthusiastic crowd is expected.

WHO'S WHO ON YALE

MAURICE R. BRANN, left end, is a native of Warren, Pa., and prepared for Yale on the Andover Academy eleven. He was left end part of the big games last year. He is a Sheffield Scientific School senior, is twenty-two years old, weighs 164 pounds and is 5 feet 10 inches tall.

NELSON STROWBRIDGE TALBOTT, captain and left tackle, is the only member of the machine who was a regular last year. This is his third season on the team. He comes from Dayton, and prepared for Yale. He is twenty-two years of age, is 6 feet 1 inch in height, and weighs 185 pounds. He is a member of the senior class of the Sheffield Scientific School.

JOHN IRVING CONROY, left guard, was a member of the freshman eleven last season, and, before his entrance to Yale played on the Boys' High School, Brooklyn, team. He is twenty years of age, weighs 198 pounds and is 6 feet 1 inch tall. His home is in Brooklyn. He is a Sheffield Scientific junior.

CARL B. WHITE, centre, was snapback on his freshman team two seasons ago. He is a member of the Sheffield class of 1916. His home is in Chattanooga, Tenn., and he prepared for Yale at Notre Dame Academy. He is twenty-one years of age, weighs 192 pounds and is 6 feet tall.

JAMES PELHAM WALDEN, right guard, is the heavyweight of the team, tipping the scales at 220 pounds. He is twenty-one years old, and is 6 feet 2 inches tall. His home is in Passaic, New Jersey, and he prepared for Old Hill at the Tome School, Port Deposit, Maryland. He was a freshman kicker last year.

CARLETON WALTER BETTS, right tackle, is a native of Buffalo. He was the best man for the team in his game against Princeton last week and Harvard on Saturday. He was a guard on the freshman team last year, but has been substitute tackle on the varsity this Fall, till he was promoted to a regular berth last week. He is twenty years old, weighs 180 pounds and is 6 feet 1 inch tall. He came to Yale from the Lawrenceville Academy eleven.

FRED WILLIAMS, right end, was on the freshman team as tackle two years ago, was varsity substitute tackle last season, and was moved out to end on the varsity only three weeks ago. He made good from the first rush. He was a member of the freshman crew two years ago, and was on the varsity squad last June at New London. He is a member of the New York Athletic Club, which has given so many athletes to both Yale and Harvard. He prepared for Yale at the St. Paul School, Concord, and is a member of the academic class of 1915. He is twenty-three years of age, is 6 feet 1 inch tall, and weighs 165 pounds.

ALEXANDER WILSON, quarterback, played the same position last season and held it on the freshman team two seasons back. His preparatory football was played on the Princeton Preparatory School eleven in New Jersey. His home is in Binghamton, N. Y., and he is a member of the junior class, academic, and is the logical candidate for the Yale captaincy another season. He is twenty-two years old, weighs 162 pounds, and is 6 feet tall.

FORESTER AINSWORTH, left halfback, a Boston boy, is another veteran. He was the fastest halfback of the eleven last year, and has been on Yale's 'Varsity team for two seasons. He is a member of the Sheffield Scientific School, and came to Yale from the Stone School, Boston. He is twenty-two years old, weighs 168 pounds, and is 5 feet 10 inches in height.

CARROLL W. KNOWLES, right halfback, is another veteran halfback, who received his preliminary school training in Massachusetts. He played for two seasons on the Worcester Academy team before coming to Yale, and was on the Yale freshman team two years ago. He is a member of the Sheffield class of 1916, and is a star at punting. He is twenty-one years of age, weighs 152 pounds and is 5 feet tall.

JAMES PELHAM WALDEN, right guard, is the heavyweight of the team, tipping the scales at 220 pounds. He is twenty-one years old, and is 6 feet 2 inches tall. His home is in Passaic, New Jersey, and he prepared for Old Hill at the Tome School, Port Deposit, Maryland. He was a freshman kicker last year.

HARRY WILLIAM LE GORE, fullback, played ten same position on the Yale freshman eleven last year, and was fullback at Mercersberg for the two previous seasons. He is also a remarkable shortstop, and captained the Yale freshman nine last Spring. His home is in Le Gore, Maryland. He is an academic sophomore, is twenty years old, weighs 167 pounds, and is 5 feet 9 inches tall.

LYON CARTER, first substitute end, was a regular last year, and would undoubtedly be playing this week but for a badly sprained knee. As Stillman is still suffering from an injured knee, and is a doubtful starter in the game, Carter will play a good share of the Harvard match. He is a native of Hartford, and studied preparatory football at Exeter. He is a member of the senior class. His father, Rev. C. P. Carter, was the first collegiate pitcher to use a curve ball. Carter is twenty-one years old, weighs 158 pounds, and is a fast 11 inches tall.

CHARLES M. SHELDON, JR., substitute tackle, originally a freshman last year, and prepared for Yale at Lawrenceville. He was a regular right tackle till two weeks ago. He is twenty years old, weighs 182 pounds, and is 5 feet 11 inches tall.

Her Husband's Widow

A Thrilling Story of Romance, Adventure and Intrigue, in Which a Beautiful Young Bride Plays the Part of the Heroine

CHAPTER XXVI.—(Continued)

FOR some minutes Sir Ralph smoked in silence. Then he got up and consulted a railway guide hanging at the corner of a bookcase. "She can't very well get here before tomorrow evening," he remarked; "your telegram would not reach her till the last train today had left Otsan. Do you propose to take any steps in the meantime?"

"No," answered Varney, without raising his eyes. "There are no steps to be taken till I have heard what she and he have to say."

"You want to bring them face to face?"

"That is my idea at present. I must think. I'm dazed at the moment. If you don't mind, I would rather be alone just now. This is rather a facer—what?"

The stricken man roused himself with a painful effort. "I know you mean to be sympathetic, Ralph, but there's really nothing to be done or said till she comes."

The dressing bell rang. "Stay to dinner if you like," he went on wearily, "I don't fell inclined for any. I shall go for an all-night run presently. I think it may clear my head a bit."

Varney remained till night fell, brooding over the catastrophe which had overtaken his house, while his cousin in the room below ate the dinner prepared for him and drank success to himself in the wine bought by the uncle of the girl he was helping to ruin.

VARNEY TRIES TO FORGET BY MUCH SPEEDING

In the course of the next twenty-four hours Oswald Varney drove over half the south of England. He thanked Heaven for his motor car. How otherwise he could have contrived to exist while Leslie was speeding toward him across two kingdoms as fast as a train could carry her he could not imagine. He raced furiously along the roads and lanes not knowing, not caring, whither he was going. In the velocity of the car he seemed to find an outlet for the violence of his emotions; in the constant vigilance and precision required to steer at such a speed he found some distraction from the devils which possessed him.

He came of an old, fighting, hard-drinking race, always more remarkable for pugnacity and ferocity than for virtue or intelligence. As Leslie had once remarked, he was very much the same man as his ancestors. Beneath his genial and at times listless manner slumbered ugly passions and very primitive instincts. Hair-like misfortune befallen a man of the people Varney would have been contemptuously, "Why this fuss?" As it was, scandal had blighted his home. He had been duped, he had been made ridiculous and pitiable before all society; he had been betrayed to much the same way his ancestors had betrayed women. And his child—her boy—was thrust aside from the succession to his house.

Faster and faster he drove, but devils sat beside him in the car, shouting these things in his ear. Leslie, too, whom he had loved as he never had loved any other woman—it was she who had done this thing—who had deceived him all these years. She, who had been like Caesar's wife, rather, like the wife of a Varney, above suspicion! How often he had marked her, rapt in a reverie, and thought how pretty she looked in such pensive moods. No doubt she was thinking of the happy moments she had passed with Steele. Steele! a ranker, a man who had, perhaps, cleaned his officer's boots. In his fury he all but drove the car headlong into a river.

He was a laughing stock—and Jimmy! Bah, why should he care about Jimmy—her son—son of the soldier's wife? He should never be heir of Reves. Better old Gaveston than he. He would stamp them out utterly—all three; well, perhaps not Jimmy, but the woman and her husband, since her husband he was. That is what all the Gavestons and Varneys would have done when they had the right of pit and gallows in their domain and administered justice within their castle walls. This vile, ridiculous age! This matter—a man's own honour—was expected to submit to the arbitration of a court to be settled by some wordy, hireling lawyers, the mob grinning and looking on.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THANK heaven, Steele was, at any rate, a man and a soldier—he would be ready to fight—to settle this thing as men should do. And when he had killed Steele he could send Leslie away—perhaps force her to live in absolute isolation in some remote village under penalty of never seeing her son.

That Leslie should have dared to love any man but him! It was atrocious; it was monstrous; it was audacious. He could not have loved a king as a rival. Perhaps she would have grace enough to appreciate her infamy when her frenzy was past.

Leslie had not yet come. He threw off his motoring rig, and drank a brandy and soda thirstily. He had eaten nothing for many hours. He sat in his study, smoking continuously, listening intently for the sound of wheels halting before the door. He caught sight of his dishevelled self in the mirror. A curious instinct inherited from his sires decided him to dress ceremonially. After all this was a solemn occasion—something grave and memorable—since it was an event in the history of his family. For the next half hour he was busy in his dressing room.

STEELE AGREES TO COME TO SIR RALPH'S ROOM

The telephone bell rang. He rushed to it. Gaveston was speaking. "Steele telegraphs that he will come over to my rooms this evening. Am I to bring him round to you?"

"Yes, at once. Don't let him suspect that we have discovered anything."

He would trap them in the same cage; neither should escape him. Correctly clothed and groomed, he took up position with his back to the fireplace and waited for his wife. He heard the crunch of a taxicab's tire abruptly halting. Every muscle in him went taut and tense.

He heard her voice giving orders. There was a weary note in it, he thought. He ground his teeth. "A guilty conscience," he murmured.

He found himself using conventional phrases and adopting conventional standpoints which in other men had often excited his derision.

The door opened and she came toward him. Her pretty, pale face was flushed about the cheeks, her red hair was tumbled and a lock or two had strayed down across her forehead. She was tired and travel-stained after her long journey from the west of Scotland, but it struck him that she had never been more beautiful.

She did not remark the coldness of his greeting. They had long been an undemonstrative couple. She threw off her light cloak and loosened the veil round her hat.

"They told me you wanted to see me here at once," she said, a querulous note in her voice, "so I came up without changing. Please don't look at me. * * * Well, what's the matter? Your telegram was rather imperious, wasn't it? Why didn't you stay in Paris?"

He continued to observe her. Indeed, in the light of this discovery she seemed a strange woman. This was Leslie Steele, he told himself, the wife of another man. A different person quite from his wife, to whom he had bidden adieu in Paris. It was comic to think that he knew all about it, and she sat there supposing him to be ignorant, herself in blissful ignorance of what was coming.

He laughed and she looked at him. Her expression changed.

"There's a storm brewing, isn't there?" she asked.

He nodded. "Yes. You and I are going to have a row, a big row."

She rested her forehead against her hand and looked away from him wearily. For the past month she had been living in the shadow of a volcano. Now the eruption was at hand. She wondered what he knew. She was so tired of it all she would gladly have made a clean breast of it there and then, but she checked herself. By such a surrender she might unnecessarily alarm him as to Jimmy's position; she would at the best inflame him with hatred and contempt for another man. Even that silly half-Egyptian woman's secret deserved a little consideration.

She crossed her ankles and assumed an air of resignation.

"Fire away," she said to him.

WAITED TO SEE IF SHE WOULD LIE

His fingers played with the crumpled marriage certificate in the pocket of his coat and he longed to thrust it under her eyes. It would be fine to hear her scream, but he waited to see if she would lie.

"I have heard funny rumors about you and Steele," he said, watching her narrowly.

She made no start of surprise, but looked straight before her. "Evidently," he went on, "this comes as no surprise to you. How long has this been going on?"

"Do I understand you to suggest that I am in love with Captain Steele?" she asked in a hard metallic voice.

"That is one of the suggestions, madam."

"It's a lie, that's all. I hate Captain Steele more than anyone else in the world."

He felt a momentary glow of pleasure on hearing that, but the next moment he remembered the paper in his pocket.

"Hah!" he said with a sneer. "It ended like that, did it? How long have you known Steele, may I be permitted to inquire?"

Her eyes were downcast and she trembled a little. "Four years," she replied.

"You had met him before you married me?"

"Yes—at Hastings, when I was a governess. She raised her eyes to his. "What have you heard, what are they saying?"

She looked so hunted and piteous that he was almost sorry for her. "Never mind what they are saying. Tell me this—is the man anything to you now?"

"No, I have said so."

Her cheek was crimson and her head sank forward. He regarded her with horror. She would deceive him to the last.

"Madam," he said, moderating his tone with a mighty effort, and advancing toward her, "You have lied to me—deliberately—throughout. I picked you out of the gutter and made you as I thought my wife. I have loved you, I thought our child was the heir of my house. You have disgraced my name—you have disgraced your child—you have ruined us all." He stood before her with clenched fists, his rigid form swaying. His voice was guttural in its intensity. "Do you know that you are a felon—that I could hand you over to the police? You married me when you knew yourself to be the wife of this man—this Victor Steele."

Ghastly pale, she rested her head on her upraised hand and stared with wide, straining eyes before her.

"Ware My Heart!"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

WATCH where you step, and dance lightly, oh, girl—who dances all the strange, and queer, and lovely, and amazing things christened musical, tongue-tickling names from South America —for my heart is there, right there, on the boards at your feet. Tennis girls and gran'mother girls, and girls who dive and ride—my eyes get a fishy blankness whenever I turn to you—for your candles fade and die beside the lightning of the dancing girl with her feet of blowing thistle-seed, her arms like blowing foam, her face like a happy flower! Oh, tread lighter than if you were dancing on the icing of a lemon pie, for there's my heart—at your slipper-tip!—NELL BRINKLEY.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THE teecher asked me to rite a essay about the buties of Nature. I sed to Pa last nite, & I dount know anything about it. I cant rite about it if I dount know it.

Then you will never beekom a riter, Pa sed. A riter can rite about anything, whether he knows anything about it or not.

I dount agree with you, dear, sed Ma.

Nevver-tha-less it is the truth, sed Pa. It always calm natural to me to rite, & I nevver cared whether I knew about a subjeck or not wen I rote about it.

& that is jest why you nevver rote anything that anybody evver heard of, sed Ma. Dount get Bobbie's hed turned with yure foolish speeches. You know he cant rite about the buties of Nature unless he has seen them.

They are all about him, sed Pa. That is why I talk him hunting & fishing with me so much. I will start his essay for him. & then he can finish it & be necdent tell his teecher that I helped him if he doesn't want to. Then Pa went into the library & this is how he beegan my essay:

The buties of nature are very butiful. That is to say, they are luvly to the eye, which is the saim thing differently expressed. The waving tree, the loving kine, the genial frog that sets on yonder primrose bank & blinks at the sun, the trout that darts up the stream and grabs an angel worm with a hook in it, the lamb that stretches its graceful limbs in the pastur, all of these buties of nature are pleesing to the human eye & the soul of a thinker like me.

What a awkward, way to begin a essay, sed Ma, to say The buties of Nature are very butiful. It is like saying The hair on a dog is very hairy.

Dount interrupt me till I have finished, sed Pa, this is how I end my part of Bobbie's essay:

From the beginning of all time man has looked up to & adored the buties of Nature. The leaves on the trees are green in the Summer & so is the grass on the ground. They are a green that no artist has evver matched. What grate painter, except my brother, evver painted a flaming forest in the Autumn, all crimson & goald. The buties of Nature cannot be did cover by man, but eternal & sublimely butiful they shall butify Nature until the planet has crumbled away to dust a billion years from now or maybe a billion & a quarter years.

I think you better let Bobbie rite his own littel essay, sed Ma. The teacher will think the poor child is very dumb if he starts off his essay like that.

Is that so? sed Pa. I dount think you are much of a critic, sed Pa. You nevver rote anything yureself or certainly if you cant rite you cant criticize. To be a critic, one must be a riter, too.

Well, sed Ma, if that is the case you aren't much of a critic eether, Bobbie, wouldnt you rather rite yure own essay?

No, I sed, I think that is a grand start Pa has rote.

When Ma wasent looking Pa gaiv me fifty cents & of course I took it, but I am going to rite my own essay anyway.

The Fortunes of Fanny

Nellie Benson Gives Fanny Private Lessons and She Practices on the Girls

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER IX.

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company.

A WEEK had passed, and, while Fanny's own nails had been "done" by Nellie, she, the newcomer to Madame Ridetti's establishment, had had opportunity to practice on only two of the girls. One of these had been Antoinette Bryan, who had made her nervous by finding fault with her. When the task was finished to the best of Fanny's ability, the subject of the experiment surveyed her hands ruefully.

"You sure have got lots to learn about this perfession," she criticised. "Now, just look at the cuticle—how rough it is. Still, I suppose you'll catch on after a while."

"I don't get any practice," Fanny protested.

"That's your own fault," returned Antoinette in a low voice. "You don't stand up for your rights and tell madame that you're here to get the run of the business—not to help Emma."

She looked around to be sure she was not overheard, then resumed:

"At this time of the year—in the Fall, when folks is coming back from the country and seashore—the swells want to get their hands, hair and complexion in good shape for the Winter, and they come here in bunches. This is a very busy time. If you wasn't here, madama would have to get another colored girl to help Emma fetch and carry for the operators—I mean for us young ladies. She'd have to pay the other one wages, of course. Your being here makes that unnecessary. Just you watch sharp and let madame know you're here to learn the game."

But Nellie, when consulted, gave other counsel. "I guess Toinette's more'n half right," she acknowledged, "but you can't afford to throw away this chance yet. I'll say a word for you."

Thus it came about that that noon Madame Ridetti suggested condescendingly that Fanny should manicure Nellie's hands. "You must practice, child," she said gravely. "You should have more ambition."

"I don't get much time," Fanny objected. "The girls are busy most of the time—and so am I, helping Emma."

SHE RECEIVES AN UNMERITED REBUKE

Madame frowned slightly. "You can always depend upon Fanny," she reproved, "to get your profession for nothing in such an establishment as this is—and do some work to make yourself even partially worth while. That is why I consent to let you learn free—on condition that you give a hand at other things when the opportunity offers."

Fanny held her peace—to all but Nellie. To her one evening, as they were about to part at the subway, she again spoke her mind.

"If I could only get along well enough to earn even a little something!" she said. "As it is, I'm very little further off than when I came."

Then Nellie made a proposal. She would have Fanny come to the little apartment she shared by herself and two of her friends and "do" the nails and shampoo the heads of all three of them. That would give the learner an idea of how to set to work. Then, on another evening, she would ask Antoinette and Bessie to come to her room and let Fanny practice on them.

"Oh, thank you!" exclaimed Fanny. She felt as if a great weight had been lifted from her shoulders. Here at last was a chance for her to learn.

"I'll not ask the other girls at Ridetti's," Nellie explained, "for they're not our sort. They're a stuck-up lot, and I don't care to have you get in with them."

"They must be pretty good operators," commented Fanny, "for I notice that they always get the man customers who come to be manicured. And I guess the men are the best-paying customers. I notice that one slip in the parlor reads: 'Ladies, 50 Cents; Gents, 75 Cents.'"

Nellie tossed her head contemptuously. "Those two girls—Josie Smythe and Henrietta Burns—look out for the men and grab them as soon as they come in, for they like to work for them because men pay big-ger tips than ladies. But their nails are harder to do, and some of the shine that they get to Ridetti's are freshies. But never mind about them. There's not much chance of your havin' to do them for a while. Then it will be your own business to look out for yourself."

FANNY RECEIVES PRIVATE LESSONS

So, without Madame Ridetti's knowledge, Fanny received private instruction in the arts of manicuring and shampooing. Away from the public shop she was less nervous and after she had experimented on Nellis and Nellie's various obliging friends a few times she was pronounced by the girls as "pretty fair, considering."

"Now I tell you what we'll do," Nellie planned on the last evening of the lessons, "we'll ask Madame to let you do one of us for the hands one day, and then show her how good our nails look when you're through. A day or two later one of us will ask to have you shampoo her, and then that one'll tell Madame that you're mighty good at the work."

"In that way she'll see that you're no fool and will be a bit afraid not to give you more chances of advancement. Then you can make good on some customer in rush hours, when the rest of the girls are busy, and a little later you can ask to be paid a little something."

"But these two girls that you don't like won't give me a chance if they can help it," Fanny told her. "They've got something against me, though I'm sure I don't know what—for they're horrid and snippy to me."

Nellie shook her head as she thought of them. "Josie Smythe and Henrietta Burns don't care for none because you're pretty and refined," she declared.

Fanny gasped. "Oh, Nell!" she protested. Nevertheless she flushed with pleasure at the compliment.

"Well, I guess you'll find out how pretty you are only too soon if you get in with girls like that," Nellie said grimly. "On condition that you succeed at Madame's you may take away some of the customers from them—some of their regulars. They always lookin' out for the rich-lookin' ones, and that's what." But just you forget those girls."

Fanny promised to try, but she did not forget the compliment to her beauty. What girl could?

GET PATTERNS ON EMBROIDERY

Hundreds of the AMERICAN'S women and girl readers have called at the AMERICAN Pattern Department and special distributing stations for the Embroidery Pattern Outfit now being distributed by this newspaper.

Those who delay are very apt to be disappointed, as the value of the Embroidery Outfit is so astonishing that the demand is increasing day by day and the supply is distinctly limited.

The only way to be SURE to get YOURS is by starting to clip the coupons TODAY—right now.

Each outfit consists of over 200 transfer patterns, one beaded embroidery hoop, ten skeins of embroidery silk and floss in assorted colors, together with a pamphlet of instructions showing how to do embroidery stitches. All you have to do to secure this outfit is to clip six coupons (of consecutive dates) from the Magazine Page of the daily AMERICAN and bring or send them, with sixty-eight cents to AMERICAN Pattern Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, or to any newsdealer (no matter where you live) who sells the Boston Evening AMERICAN. (Coupon does not appear in the Sunday edition. Five cents extra by mail.

Did you get one of the FREE embroidery patterns the AMERICAN is giving to its girl and women readers?

If not, better call on your newsdealer without delay and tell him you want one.

The free pattern he will give you is a hot-iron transfer doily design, size ten and one-half inches, and is an example of the more than 200 different designs included in the AMERICAN'S Embroidery Pattern Outfit.

Locked Cask Fails to Hold Houdini

Harry Houdini was locked in a regulation beer cask by a committee of employes of a brewing company last evening on the stage of B. F. Keith's Theatre, after the cask had been filled with beer.

It takes fifteen minutes to head up a cask, but in two minutes after the keg had been locked, Houdini made his appearance from behind the curtains. The cask was found intact with all the padlocks in exactly the same condition as when the cabinet was closed.

Good Things Will Come from the War—Vile as It Is

The Minds of Men Will Be Awakened, and a Good Many Savages Will Be Killed Off

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

Since the war began men have been actually thinking who never REALLY thought before.

A number of royalties and a good many army men are included among those now thinking for the first time.

The entire human race is aroused mentally by the new conditions of the world and by the question, "WHAT IS TO FOLLOW?"

Ferrero, the great Italian historian, whose articles we frequently publish, commenting on the changes in territory that will follow the war, adds:

"The transference of territory will be nothing compared with the change in ideas, a change already noticeable. Perhaps this war will recreate the mind of the world."

In our Civil War millions of men were engaged, and while the war was a horrible calamity, costing hundreds of thousands of lives and many thousands of millions of dollars, it did a great deal for the intellect of America.

Men were taken from their own little villages, their own little stagnant pools, in which they were born, lived and would have died without the war.

Those from the North went South, those from the South went North.

Men met each other, learned to know each other, exchanged real thought, in the face of death and danger.

INVENTIVE GENIUS ESPECIALLY WAS STIMULATED BY THE WAR. MEN FOUND THEMSELVES DEPENDING UPON THEIR OWN INGENUITY FOR FOOD, FOR SAFETY, FOR LIFE ITSELF. THEY LEARNED TO HIDE, TO BUILD BRIDGES, TO TEST THE SAFETY OF SWAMPS, ESPECIALLY TO PIT THEIR OWN INTELLIGENCE AGAINST THAT OF THE ENEMY.

When the war was over the United States had been weakened by the loss of life and money, but made stronger by the increase in mental activity.

So it will be all over the world after this war. Millions will die—among them some of the best and a good many of the worst sort of human beings.

Tens of thousands of millions of dollars will be actually burned up in the war. The amount lost by the destruction of manufactures and trade cannot be calculated.

But, while the war lasts, every man capable of thought IS THINKING.

The emotion, the excitement, the danger, the intense interest, are doing for the minds of men what the plow does for the soil.

Thought is going deeper into the mind. The whole race of men will be better equipped mentally when the war is over.

Another feature of the war and a useful one is this:

It will kill off a great many of those MOST FOND OF FIGHTING.

The first man killed, all things being equal, is the man who likes fighting BEST.

He enlists first, exposes himself to danger, is an admirable citizen of the republic or the kingdom—and is killed quickly.

WHEN HE GOES THE HUMAN RACE HAS JUST THAT MUCH LESS FIGHTING INSTINCT LEFT IN IT.

The history of humanity has been a history of war. And the history of war has been a slow process by which the love of fighting, the brutal instinct, has been eliminated.

When war began—that is, say, when the first half man and half monkey saw one of his rivals with something that he wanted—ALL CREATURES LIKED TO FIGHT.

Of our early ancestors ALL WERE FIGHTERS—MEN, WOMEN, CHILDREN, OLD AND YOUNG.

They all had huge jaws, big teeth, low foreheads, hairy bodies, and fighting was their only amusement.

For the last five hundred thousand years, the time that men have lived on this planet, THEY HAVE HAD PLENTY OF THAT AMUSEMENT.

Year after year, century after century, the fighting game has killed off the most savage.

The man with the biggest jaw and the biggest tusks went out first. He was killed. His brother, a little gentler, who stayed at home, was the father of the children—and he made the race a little gentler than his dead brother would have made it.

So it has gone all through the fighting centuries. Those most anxious to fight did the fighting and were killed. Those more peaceful stayed at home, carried on the race, handed their gentler qualities down to the children—and in that way the human race has gradually changed from a horrible collection of fighting, murdering cannibals to the almost civilized set of barbarians that you see outting each other's throats in Europe now.

This war will carry on the useful game of ELIMINATING THE MOST SAVAGE AND BEASTLY AMONG US.

The hero who insists upon running out and getting killed is applauded. He deserves applause. Every nation still needs him.

But when he goes out a gentler individual will take his place as the father of children—and while that isn't quite so heroic, IT IS THE PARTICULAR THING THAT HAS IMPROVED THE HUMAN RACE.

Mentally by stimulating the brain, morally by killing off those fondest of fighting, this war will do good.

Console yourself with that thought.

The Silent Shrapnel of the Skies

The Woman Who Is Over-Economical

She Succeeds in Spoiling All Pleasures—A Case Where a Bank Account Does Not Mean Happiness

By DOROTHY DIX

WE hear so much about the extravagance of women that there is a general impression that all women are wasters and spenders, but, in reality, the feminine sex as a whole is rather given to parsimony than it is to prodigality.

This is natural enough because, as a class, women have the actual handling of so little money that a dollar looks as big as a cartwheel to them. Also the great majority of women, having no way of earning money, are afraid to spend what they have, lest when that is gone they can get no more.

The one thing that the average woman will spend money for is outside show. She will buy good clothes, and live in as pretentious a house or apartment as she can manage, but she will scrimp on her food and the real comforts of life. It is woman, and not man, who will lunch on a chocolate eclair and a glass of soda, and who, when there are no men in the family, subsists on toast and tea and burns a coal oil lamp to keep down the electric light bill.

Now undoubtedly thrift is an admirable virtue, but it is one of the virtues that lean to vice's side, especially in its over-done estate, and it is a cold, hard fact that just as many women have ruined their husbands and wrecked their homes by stinginess as ever have by extravagance.

I have known women who were so economical that they kept their houses as bare and unattractive as a barn, and whose tables were spread with convict fare. All warmth and beauty and luxury were rigorously lopped off because they cost money, and as a result the husband and children stayed away from home just as much as possible.

I have known other women so excessively economical that they blighted their family life by putting a price tag on it. The only talk in their homes was about money. The first question concerning anything that was suggested was, "What will it cost?" They couldn't do this because it would cost a quarter. They couldn't do that because it would cost a dollar. There never was a nickel for the movies nor a dime for a glass of soda water without an endless discussion about it, and a sermon on the sin of wastefulness.

Plenty of men never take their wives anywhere because wife is so economical that she takes all the pleasure out of every treat by worrying over what it cost. She's demanding to know why he got orchestra seats at the theatre instead of gallery seats when he could have saved fifty cents on them as easy as not. She insists on going to a cheap lunch place instead of a good restaurant for a meal, and she has fits if husband even suggests such a thing as a taxicab.

Now, when a man goes out to have a good time he makes up his mind beforehand to pay the price, and nothing gets on his nerves worse than to have as his companion some one who haggles over every penny, and who is such a tightwad that she can't loosen up even enough to enjoy herself. The result is that after a few experiences with a miserly wife, the man takes his pleasures alone, or else with some lady of a less economical temperament.

Still worse, there are wives so stingy that they make it impossible for a man to even spend the money he earns himself as he pleases. If a man has a hobby such a wife nags him to death about the money his books or beetles or china cost. If he likes to play golf she is forever figuring up what his club dues and golf sticks cost. If he's crazy about an automobile she never rides in it without bemoaning the price of gasoline and lamenting the cost of tires.

Such a woman counts it unto herself for righteousness that she is saving her husband's money, and she is always telling him that he would be in the poorhouse if it wasn't for her thrift, but she deceives herself. By her stinginess she not only destroys all the happiness of her home, which is far beyond any money value, but she kills her husband's incentive to make money.

Consciously or not, he says to himself, "What's the use?" and because his work brings him none of the perquisites that he wants he insensibly slackens effort.

If you will notice you will observe that the happiest families are not those in which the wife is a human cash register, recording relentlessly every penny. Doubtless such families grow rich and have money in the bank, but they have no laughter around the dinner table, no chumming of husband and wife together. The happy families are those in which the wife is liberal minded and liberal handed, and where the almighty dollar isn't the chief household god.

All of which goes to show that economy, like everything else, is only good in moderation, and that a thrifty wife isn't always the treasure she is painted.

ART THOU ALIVE?

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

ART thou alive? Nay, not too soon reply.
Though hand, and foot, and lip, and ear, and eye
Respond and do thy bidding; yet may be
Grim death had done his direst work with thee.
Life, as God gives it, is a thing apart
From active body and from beating heart.
It is the vital spark, the unseen fire,
That moves the mind to reason and aspire;
It is the force that bids emotion roll
In mighty billows from the surging soul.

It is the light that grows from hour to hour,
And floods the brain with consciousness of power.
It is the spirit dominating all,
And reaching God with its imperious call,
Until the shining glory of His face
Illuminates each sorrowful, dark place.
It is the truth that sets the bondsman free,
Knowing he will be what he wills to be.
With its unburied dead the earth is sad.
Art thou alive? Proclaim it and be glad.
Perchance the dead may hear thee and arise,
Knowing they live, and HERE is Paradise.

WAR

WHAT DO YOU SUPPOSE THE MOVING PICTURES HAD TO DO WITH IT?

We do not know, but we have been reading George Bernard Shaw, the Irish-English Elbert Hubbard—philosopher, essayist, playwright, wit and advertising man—and we gather from "G. B. S." that at the bottom of the war is the great question of INCOME, and the like of that. Says this wonderful man:

> If you happen to be poor and live in a squalid way, you will see on the cinematograph, at least we invariably see it, people dressed in very elegant materials and very exquisite dresses. And the laborer who takes his young woman to see the show has previously been contented with his lot. He has always been contented with his personal appearance, and no doubt so has his sweetheart. But having seen in that cinematograph show what a properly creased pair of trousers is like, that laborer's sweetheart suddenly finds the young man she is keeping company with has not, perhaps, a tasteful crease in his trousers.
>
> And so on and so on, in a manner truly Shavian.

Read ALL of it, in the SUNDAY AMERICAN, and, be entertained, amused and informed.

"AND FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, WHAT WOULD THE TRIUMPH OF GERMANY MEAN?"

The late Lord Roberts asked this question—and the late Lord Roberts answered it—for the current number of the Hibbert Journal.

Just before leaving England, on what proved to be his last journey to France, the great general wrote what may now be called his farewell message to England. "Let there be no mistake," said he, "if Germany wins in this war it means the downfall of the British empire. And what would be the naval burden thrown on the United States if the Kaiser became in stern reality what he once styled himself in an irrepressible outburst of vanity—the Admiral of the Atlantic?"

The novelists, the essayists and the poets have been having a lot to say about the war. HERE we have the situation discussed by a man who made war his business and his life.

We affirm that the farewell message of Earl Roberts is one of the most important contributions to the literature of this greatest conflict in history. It will be printed IN FULL in the SUNDAY AMERICAN. We earnestly recommend it to all who would understand what this war means, from the point of view of England and her colonies.

WE ARE NOT VERY FAR FROM THE WAR, HERE IN BOSTON.

How are our friends and neighbors in Canada getting along? What are they DOING? What are they SAYING? What is GOING ON in the shops, the theatres, the hotels, the picture houses? Is business good or otherwise? What does the long Winter hold forth?

A reporter for the Sunday AMERICAN has been spending a few days in Montreal, the Dominion's metropolis and commercial capital. He was asked these questions. He tries to answer them in the SUNDAY AMERICAN. Obviously, he writes under some restraint, careful not to wound the fine sensibilities of our neighbors and MORE careful not to touch upon such subjects as might be marked: "Danger! Keep Off!"

On the whole, an INTERESTING contribution, accompanied by some splendid photographs—just received—of the first Canadian contingent in camp at Salisbury Plain, England.

ONE WORD AND WE SHOULD HAVE LOST OUR MARGARET!

Thank goodness! Miss Foley did NOT say the fateful word.

It happened in Nevada—not once but frequently.

Miss Foley went to the "wild and woolly" to champion Votes for Women. (The suffragists won, by the way.)

Almost every day some son of Nevada asked the Boston girl to be his'n. One of them, in fact, is WAITING for her.

And will Miss Margaret Foley return to him?

"Aha!"

"Aha!" again.

THAT is the story.

Read it in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

In the magazine section of the SUNDAY AMERICAN somebody writes of the recent marriage of the splendidly developed dancer, Ruth St. Denis, and Edwin Shawn, "the handsomest man in America." This union, we are told seriously, "may produce results of great value to the science of race betterment." Students of eugenics, we are further advised, are "closely watching this marriage."

"Well, well, well," as old Squire Applegate used to say, "who'd a thunk it!"

Tom Powers, Bud Fisher, F. Opper and R. Outcault have done their share to make the Sunday paper interesting. The Katzenjammers will also "oblige."

The EDITORIAL in the SUNDAY AMERICAN will be the MOST HELPFUL editorial printed by any Sunday newspaper ANYWHERE.

Two hundred alert reporters will represent you on Saturday throughout New England, to the end that the SUNDAY AMERICAN may contain ALL the latest news.

DID SOMEBODY MENTION THE AFFAIR IN THE "BOWL" AT NEW HAVEN, BETWEEN HARVARD AND YALE?

One word about the SUNDAY AMERICAN and the football classic of 1914:

Remember how the SUNDAY AMERICAN scored with pictures and story on the Saturday World Series game at Philadelphia?

Tomorrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN will DUPLICATE THAT ACHIEVEMENT WITH REFERENCE TO THE HARVARD-YALE GAME.

Finally:

Complaints multiply that our friends occasionally find the newsdealer sold out of SUNDAY AMERICANS.

The circulation of the SUNDAY AMERICAN is GENUINE circulation. There are no "returns."

Be on the safe side.

Speak to Mr. Newsdealer. Say to him:

"ALWAYS save a SUNDAY AMERICAN for me!"

DO YOU KNOW THAT—
